CHAMBERLAIN OUTLINES NEW ECONOMIC WAR

Premier Tells Commons That Britain's Determined to Halt German Supplies.

INTENSIFY SEA WARFARE

Germany Must Be Deprived of Essential Materials, Declaration Says.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Prime Minister Chamberlain disclosed to the house of commons today a series of trade agreements with neutral nations surrounding Germany and warned that the Allies were "determined to prosecute the economic war to he utmost of their power."

The prime minister outlined steps to choke off German supplies and said that he looked forward to an "intensification" of the blockade against Germany and of British trade exchanges with neutral countries.

The Allies are determined to "continue and intensify the blockade in every possible way," Chamberlain said.

The prime minister declared that the neutral nations concerned in the trade agreements "must realize that we cannot agree to make available to them products drawn from empire sources unless in return they are prepared to give us guarantees of the limitation of their future trade with Germany."

Before beginning his statement on the conduct of the war Chamberlain in answer to a question said that German-Russian cooperation appeared to be "most marked" in the economic sphere.

Then in his statement Chamberlain said that Germany was intimidating neutral nations with threats to make them conform to

25,000,000-Mile 'Nose Count' Gets Underway Today

A Richland county census army of 64 workers joined a federal legion of 120,000 enumerators that set out at 9 a. m. today on a long trek which will take them a total of 25,000,000 miles, produce the answers to more than 2,000,000,000 questions and will tell the nation how far it has come since census men in colonial dress made the first tabulation in 1790.

The census army on the march today included 32 workers in Mansfield as part of the 271 in the six-county 17th district, expected to cover most of the territory in two-weeks. The rural schedule is expected to be completed within a month.

No home was too fine nor none too mean for the enumerators. Uncle Sam promised the enumerators 4 cents apiece (or a little more in special cases) for the name and vital statistics in every one of his estimated 132,000,000 nephews and nieces.

Overshadowing all popular quiz games of the moment, the census had, legally, the one central purpose of finding out exactly how many Americans there were, so that the states could be allotted their fair share of the seats in the house of representatives. The authors of the constitution planned it that way, and the nose-counting has been done every 10 years.

Meet With Bullitt on 'White Book' Charges

High Senate Officials Arrange For Frank Discussion Today of German Claims On U. S. War Intervention.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—A frank, informal meeting was arranged today between high ranking senate foreign relations committee members and William C. Bullitt, U. S. ambassador to France and central figure in German white book charges that Uncle Sam's diplomats promised American intervention on the side of the Allies in Europe's war.

A luncheon scheduled some time ago afforded an opportunity for the meeting, but the actual invitations were less than 24 hours old this morning.

The occasion brought Bullitt face to face with foreign relations committee members at a time when legislators in both houses were demanding an official investigation of the white book charges with the envoy to France to be summoned as the principal witness.

State department officials quickly denied the white book charges, but nevertheless a furious congressional dispute was touched off over the conduct of American diplomats and this government's entire foreign policy.

A free and easy, off-the-record discussion of the entire matter was in the cards for the luncheon meeting.

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley, a veteran foreign relations committee member, was host. Invited were Committee Chairman Pittman (D., Nev.), Sens. George (D., Ga.), Clark (D., Mo.), Guffey (D., Pa.) and several other foreign relations committee members. No Republicans were included in the invitation list.

Administration leaders, busily working to block any formal investigation of its diplomats, expected the luncheon meeting to relieve some of the pressure for an inquiry. Sen. Van Nuys (D., Ind.) said he expected Bullitt to "talk frankly" at the luncheon, and said that those present would get a "good picture" of events abroad.

Bullitt chatted with half a dozen members of the foreign relations committee at a similar luncheon held about a week before the German white book was published.

Two Persons Report Thefts By Pickpockets.

Two persons reported to police last night that they were victims of pickpockets.

John Weichel, Sandusky, who came to Mansfield last night to attend the Gladys Swarthout concert at Senior high school auditorium told police that in the crowd at the entrance to the building he had been jostled, and that soon afterwards he discovered his pocket had been picked, and a billfold containing $30 in currency was missing.

Mrs. F. O. Wilcox, 74 Bowman street told police that her purse, containing $10.50 was snatched as she was returning home early last evening. She said as she crossed Dickson avenue on Bowman street, a man stepped up behind her an snatched her pocketbook and that she did not have an opportunity to see him.

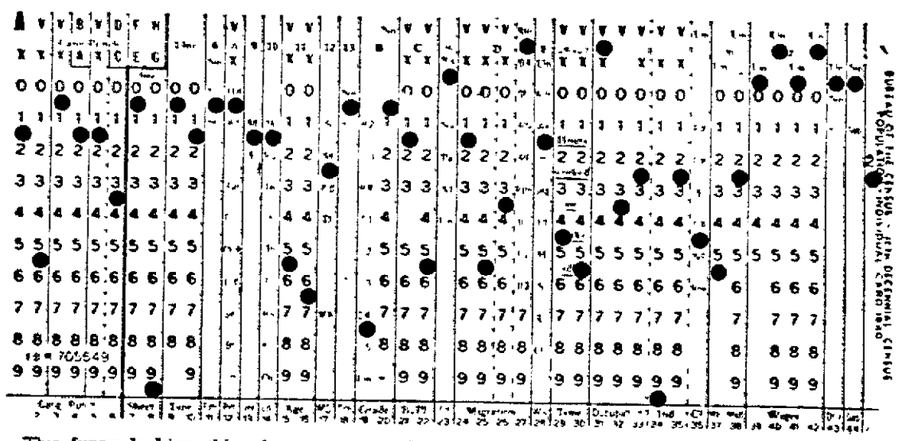
This Is What Census Records Will Look Like



This funny looking thing is a census card—and there'll be one for all of us in the census bureau files at Washington when the nose-counting job is completed. Note that no name appears on the record. Those irregularly-punched holes, the work of an intricate machine, contain all the information.

SWORD, STATE CLASH OVER 30-N DETOUR

Threatens to Erect Blockade at Ontario-Shelby Road Intersection.

CALLS ROUTING ILLEGAL

Mayor Locke Also Objects to Use of Ausdale Avenue as Highway Route.

Charging that the state highway department was illegally making use of county roads on its system of detours on U. S. route 30 N, County Engineer Howard C. Sword today served the state with notice to keep its through traffic off the roads.

Sword threatened to erect blockades on the Ontario-Shelby road at the intersections of U. S. route 30 N and 30 S if the warning was not regarded.

He said the heavy truck traffic over the one-mile detour between the two federal highways was breaking up the five-inch bituminous passing strip on the one lane highway and estimated damage already caused at over $300.

The detour was moved to the county road by the state about a month ago after city officials complained about routing the heavy freight trucks over city streets not built for such traffic.

Sword charged that the state, in routing the traffic over the county road, had violated two laws by failing to get permission from the county or to keep the road in repair while it was being used by them.

"The county can't allow its roads to go to pieces just because the state wants to keep up a fake economy program," the engineer asserted.

"It's a case of shifting the burden onto the county by diverting traffic onto a road that was not built for heavy traffic."

He pointed out that the pounding of the trucks over the surface was causing damage at the "worst" time of the year when the frost was leaving the ground.

Locke Hits Plan.

Mayor William J. Locke said this morning that two representatives from the route marking department had called on him for permission to reroute the detour over Ausdale avenue.

The mayor said he objected to the plan because of danger to the school children at senior high, and suggested that the Latest Cromwell Speech Fails to Create Furore.

TORONTO, Ont. —(INS)— The newest Canadian speech of U. S. Minister to Canada James H. R. (Jimmy) Cromwell passed off quietly today without arousing any of the furore that his previous declaration did.

Sticking strictly to academic topics in contrast to his recent anti-Nazi, pro-ally blast, Cromwell urged that greater attention be paid to education as a means of preserving democracy.

"We must shape our democratic ideals and processes to the end that the problems which tyranny falsely boasts can be solved only by the sword shall be solved by free men under free institutions," Cromwell told the old boys of the University of Toronto schools.

"Let us never forget that an educated and alert electorate is the prime necessity and the very foundation of our Democratic ideals."

Swarthout's Talent, Beauty and Charm Thrill 1,400 at Concert

She's Really Good In Opera Roles But Not at Housekeeping.

By JANE WILLIAMS

Gorgeous is the word for Gladys This was the consensus of more than 1,400 music lovers who crowded Senior high school auditorium last night to hear Gladys Swarthout in the final concert on the 1939-40 program of the Mansfield Civic Music association.

More than 200 members of Civic Music associations from other cities came to Mansfield for the concert. When every seat was taken, chairs were placed and more than 100 persons stood up during the entire concert.

A brilliant talent, coupled with beauty and charm and a nice sense of theater technique, make this star of the Metropolitan Opera company a commanding figure. Her selection of numbers, however, left one feeling a little disappointed. With the exception of the aria from "Mignon," there were few numbers that were familiar to the average concert-goer.

Miss Swarthout radiates personal charm and magnetism. With her dark golden brown coloring, and in the golden gown and cap of a medieval princess, she made one think of a topaz in an old gold setting. As a matter of fact, her favorite stone is topaz. On the third finger of her left hand, completely covering a narrow diamond wedding band, was a huge glowing topaz, mounted high on a crust of diamonds, and around her throat was an intricate design of topaz and diamonds—both anniversary gifts from her husband, Frank Chapman, a concert singer and star in his own right.

Miss Swarthout doesn't mind talking about her husband; in fact, you get the impression that she likes to. They have two homes, one in Beverly Hills and one in New York city, and while they don't have a lot of time to spend in either of them, they are together a great deal of the time. They have just returned from a week's vacation in Florida, and he will accompany her to Cleveland next week when she returns to Ohio to sing "Carmen" with the Metropolitan Opera company.

BLACK HITS AT JUSTICE COURTS

Patrol Chief Tells Safety Seminar J. P.'s Deterrent to Law Enforcement.

By KEN WOODMAN

(News-Journal Staff Writer)

COLUMBUS — Colonel Lynn Black, director of the state highway patrol in Ohio, yesterday afternoon lashed out at justice of the peace courts as one of the greatest deterrents to traffic law enforcement in Ohio.

Speaking to 50 Ohio newspapermen in attendance at the first traffic safety seminar ever to be held in the state, Colonel Black said the greatest difficulty encountered by the patrol was the necessity of taking offenders into courts where the collection of costs seems to be the matter of prime importance.

"I feel strongly on this subject," he declared, "and we are hoping that the law can be amended in the near future so that offenders may be taken into county courts for hearing."

He explained that it is the policy of the patrol to prevent accidents and correct causes rather

"Pints of Rum" Puzzles Director's Wife.

INDIANAPOLIS—Mrs. Fabien Sevitzky, wife of the conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra, didn't know what to think of a telegram from her husband in New York reading, "Don't forget to bring pints of rum."

WAIT 'CRISIS'

Police Dictatorship Set Up in N. Y. Strike Threat.

NEW YORK — (INS) — An emergency police dictatorship began bossing New York City today pending the arrival of John L. Lewis, CIO leader, who apparently will decide whether or not there is to be a strike on the subway, elevated and surface transportation lines.

Lewis and Mayor F. H. LaGuardia and probably officials of the CIO Transport Workers union which authorized the strike were to confer at city hall.

Outwardly the city appeared the same as millions of persons jammed themselves into subways in the early morning rush. But by nightfall the vast subway lines may be paralyzed except for the city-owned system.

LaGuardia placed the entire city government on "crisis footing" until 8 a. m. tomorrow.

NEFFNER TAKES GRIFFITH POST

Bricker Names Him Secretary of State; He Looms as G.O.P. 'Write-In' Candidate.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — George Neffner, Ohio's election expert, was appointed secretary of state today as speculation mounted that would be the Republican organization's "write-in" candidate nomination to the office at the May 14 primary.

Neffner's selection by Gov. John W. Bricker to succeed the late H. Earl Griffith is effective until Nov. 5 when a "short-term" candidate will be elected to serve until Jan. 1.

Ohio Republicans are awaiting the official "go" signal for an unprecedented campaign to write-in Neffner's name for the Republican nomination.

Some party leaders, frankly admitting that such a drive would be a tremendous undertaking, were confident that the state organization would be equal to the task.

Others, however, were doubtful that as many as 150,000 voters could be pursuaded to write Neffner's name on the ballot instead of marking the customary "X" beside the name of Edward J. Hummel of Cincinnati.

The death of Secretary of State Earl Griffith last Saturday left Hummel as the only remaining candidate qualified for a position on the ballot. Hummel and the Republican state organization long have been at odds.

PENNSYLVANIA AREA FEARING 1936 'REPEAT'

THOUSANDS HOMELESS

Waters Recede in Places But Residents Fear Double Crest as Tide Goes Up Again.

BULLETIN

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. —(U P) —Bridges connecting Wilkes-Barre to Kingston and Plymouth began giving away today under the relentless pounding of flood waters from the torrent-choked Susquehanna river.

(By Associated Press)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — Fearful of fresh devastation, communities along 100 miles of Pennsylvania's flood-choked Susquehanna river watched anxiously today as the crest rolled southward, with thousands homeless and other thousands ready to flee.

Flood-ravaged towns drew some encouragement from a prediction by federal and state forecasters that although the normally placid stream still was rising at some points, "stationary or falling stages will prevail" throughout the entire system, including two branches.

The river began dropping here last night after remaining stationary at nine feet above flood level for several hours, but early today it began rising again slowly.. Observers warned of a double-crest such as in the 1936 flood when the stream began to fall, only to rise an additional five feet later.

Downstream at Sunbury, where the north and west branches of the river meet, the level began receding after back waters from creeks flooded two square miles.

Red Cross and other relief agencies hurriedly set up stations to aid thousands of refugees housed in churches, schools and other large buildings. Coast guardsmen from neighboring New Jersey joined in evacuating families.

Schools Closed.

Schools were closed throughout the flood-stricken area. Business in many places was at standstill. A majority of roads were closed and cellars of hundreds of homes inundated.

The WPA authorized expenditure of $100,000 for emergency aid. This anthracite city, where 1,500

Career Versus Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The young Brazilian soprano of the Metropolitan Opera House, Bidu Sayao, says it's not good for a woman to work all her life for a career, and that she hopes in five or six years to have a small home and some comforts with her husband though, as yet, Senorita Sayao has made no man happy by accepting him.

"When I take a husband, I finish my career, for how could a husband travel with me when I sing?" says the senorita.

Memory goes back to an interesting interview in the early day of my newspaper work. "It's the woman with the little parlor voice who feels she'd be robbing the world if she married instead of devoting her time to a career," said Madame Johanna Gadski at the time she was thrilling audiences at the Metropolitan Opera House with her magnificent voice.

I happened to be interviewing the prima donna in her apartment, where she was swathed from neck to hem in a vast cooking apron and was basting a goose for the family dinner. Not that Madame Gadski hadn't plenty of servants to prepare everything the family appetite dictated, but when she wasn't singing and rehearsing, she got a real kick out of cooking the family dinner.

How often I've thought of that interview, when I've heard some little tremolo soprano declare she could not consider marriage on account of a career, or worse still, when she propsed deserting a family of husband and children because she had such an abounding faith in her little squeak.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"When you're in the attic, you can hear perfectly anything shouted from my room or from the kitchen," I said.

"Good!" my father said. "Harry, give that police whistle to your wife. Then open those two hall windows which are nearest the ladders, and afterward come back here."

When he came back, my father spoke tersely:

"Richard already knows that when the police whistle sounds, the men are to break the windows and throw in the tear gas," he said. "So be ready, Lillian, to blow the whistle the second you get the signal. Now, Harry, go to that speaking tube and say the things on which we have agreed, in that big, booming voice of yours. Margaret, sit close to me ready for any special thing I may want you to do."

"Yo-ho, you up in the attic" he said, and repeated the cry three times. "Listen carefully if you value your life. In another minute or two, tear gas is coming into every window of the attic. It won't be strong enough to kill you, but it will surely put you out of business if you don't follow directions. You are to come now to this speaking tube"—he gave careful directions for its location—"and say 'all right' if you are going to obey directions, which you'd better do. Then mark the location of the staircase. Don't open the door leading to it until I call to you to open it. But you'd better get near it, for you won't be able to find it after the tear gas starts. And when you come down the stairs, don't try any shooting, for we'll have you covered and we can see you, while you won't be able to see anything for a while. Now I'm going to count to one hundred slowly, and if you aren't yelling 'all right' into that tube at the hundredth count, it's just going to be too bad for you."

But at the hundredth count there was no answering voice, and though he delayed action for several seconds while we breathlessly waited a decision, we heard no sound from the tube.

"Determined to bluff to the last," Harry said at last. "But I'll bet they are near the top of the stairs just about now."

"Nobody will take your wager," his wife told him, and then my father gave the word for action.

"That attic door is locked?" he asked. "Where is the key?"

"Right here." Lillian took it from her dress.

"Please give it to your husband," my father said, and Lillian passed it over.

"Now, if you'll take your place," my father said to Harry, "and Lillian will blow that whistle, we probably will get action."

Harry took up his position in the hall outside the attic door, with his mouth and nose covered with a thick cloth. Lillian blew the whistle, and then retreated to my room, as my father had commanded. And then there was a rush of footsteps, Dicky's, up the stairs from the hall below to Harry's side, while from the attic came the sound of breaking window glass. For a second there was no further sound, and then there came from the attic stairs terrible choking sounds and the tumbling of bodies down the narrow space and the pounding of fists on the door.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, April 3.

A rather perplexing and contradictory state of affairs may be read from this day's planetary configurations. In an attempt to break up some static or long-crystallized conditions there may be much strenuous effort brought to bear on knotty problems or peculiar frustrations. The mental outlook may be shrewd enough, but a propensity to attack difficulties by main force, impetuosity or rash tactics may complicate matters. The interference of strangers as well as friends should be considered with due caution. Help from unexpected sources may be winning factors.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which there may be difficult or conflicting situations to handle. These had best be attempted by naturally clever and intellectual processes rather than impetuous and reckless emotional stresses or turbulence. There may be novel or surprising developments in which both friends and strange influences must be met with calmness, sagacity and the use of writings, documents or correspondence. The solution to difficult problems may come through intervention from high places.

A child born on this day may be versatile, with fine intellect, studious, profound and industrious. It may have some original creative talent, in expressing which there may be a singular conflict or opposition. Support may come from surprising and influential sources.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Posture Sad Affair Today

By MME. QUI VIVE

The splendid, queenly pose went into the discard when women trot-trotted to the barber shop and got her wool sheared. Now and then one sees a girl, athletically inclined, who carries herself well, but she is a rare sight. The average young woman slinks along with slight regard for the attitude assumed by the body. Shoulders forward, chest flattened, tummy out. Posture of that kind makes the back ugly; it losese that pretty, inward nip at the waistline which should be there if the body is to be properly balanced.

Stand against the wall, heels, buttocks and shoulder blades touching the wall. Lift the hands high above the head, stretching the backbone to the limit. Have the head on the level. Let the hands fall at the sides, walk away. Thas is the way you should carry yourself at all times, not just when you happen to think of it.

Now and then pull up your ribs and flatten your tummy, taking several deep breaths Tones the fibers that are interlacing from the ribs down to the hips. Resilient muscles are necessary for grace and good posture. When the fibers of the body are lazy and half asleep, the figure is bound to appear lumpy, lacking in good lines.

Throw the abdomen forward and the torso falls down upon itself That habit debilitates the muscles that keep the breasts firm, so they sag and droop. The head should be carried neither forward nor back; one practice makes for stooped shoulders; the other gives a woman the bossy, frigid air which never gets beauty prizes.

Unless posture is correct there is muscle strain and the circulatory system is impeded in its work. The nervous system suffers. Often internal organs drop, interfering with the normal functioning of the digestive organs

Furthermore, erect attitude is that of the courageous mortal. Look brave and you'll feel that way. One needs to be brave in this delirious world

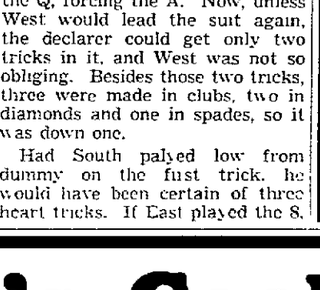
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T BE A SQUANDERER

DECLARERS frequently find that a particular suit holds cards of exactly equal value in their hand and dummy. Aside from the question of entries, it would seem off-hand to make little difference which hand comes up first with its main or secondary high card. It decides the entire result of the hand, however, in many cases. Ordinarily the first hand playing to the trick should put on a low card, thereby giving the other hand last crack at it after the intervening opponent has shown what he has to do.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	2 ♣	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT

West led the heart 4, whereupon South counted up his riches and decided the contract was a cinch. Almost without thinking about what seemed to him an unimportant detail, he played the 9 from dummy—and the beans were spilled. He tried hard thereafter, but could get no more than eight tricks, East covered the 9 with the Q, forcing the A. Now, unless West would lead the suit again, the declarer could get only two tricks in it, and West was not so obliging. Besides those two tricks, three were made in clubs, two in diamonds and one in spades, so it was down one.

Had South played low from dummy on the fust trick, he would have been certain of three heart tricks. If East played the 8, he would have his third trick built at once by the 10. If East played the Q, the A would win, and the K-9 would sit over the J as a tlenace ready for awinning finesse

A point like this is quite elementary, but you would be surprised if you knew the name of the player who made this particular mistake in a recent big championship tournament, and then failed to try an end-play in clubs and diamonds.

Variations On Beef Steak Theme

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

There's nothing better than tender beef steak and there are various ways to cook it.

Take one and one-half pounds of best steak, very lean and one and one-half inches thick. Lay it on a pastry board and season with a little salt and black pepper. Have ready a neatly-shaped roll of force-meat, roll it up in the steak and tie it. Wrap in grease-proof paper and steam for one and one-half hours. Serve with a rich gravy to which tomato sauce has been added for flavor. Serve with creamed potatoes and a crisp green salad.

For a piece of rump steak of one and one-half pounds, one and one-half inches thick, wipe and trim carefully and coat with a tablespoon of flour seasoned with pepper and salt, rubbing it in thoroughly. Heat two ounces butter in a casserole, brown the steak in it on both sides, then add two onions, thinly sliced. Remove seeds and core from a green pepper, shred finely and add to a small amount of tomato juice. Mix well together and cover closely over steak. Cook in the oven until tender, one and one-half hours. Sprinkle with chopped parsley and serve with spaghetti.

For Italian Steak cut one pound fillet into small pieces and slice two onions thinly. Dip onions in flour, fry brown and broil steak quickly. Make one-half pint thick gravy and squeeze in juice of a lemon—the lemon flavor should be predominant. Serve the steak in the center of a hot dish, cover with the onions and pour the lemon sauce around.

Another Variation.

For another variation, put one pound stewing steak, such as chuck or bottom round, through the mincer. Add teaspoon finely-chopped parsley, a pinch of herbs or nutmeg, and a little finely-minced onion. Season with salt and pepper and bind with a beaten egg. Form into little round flat cakes, sprinkle with flour and fry in hot fat, not too quickly, for about 10 minutes. Drain; serve with grilled tomatoes and mashed potatoes.

Another tasty dish is made with individual beef steak fillets. Pound with a wet knife. Cover each fillet with a half slice of bacon. Broil, then turn them over, sprinkle with salt, pepper and chopped tarragon, and broil other side. Make a border of mashed potato, fill the center with thick horseradish sauce and pour brown gravy around the outside.

MASHING BANANAS

When a recipe calls for "mashed bananas," this is the way to do it: Peel the bananas, press the pulp through a wide-meshed strainer. Beat up the pulp and measure the required amount.

16 SCIENTISTS
Reveal Great Discovery About
CONSTIPATION
Tests at World-Famous Hospital Show How To Help Nature Produce Her Own Gentle, Complete "Daily" Bowel Action!

NEW YORK: Constipation sufferers rejoice! For now violent cathartics and laxatives and harsh "roughage" products, many of which are habit forming and are often irritating to bowel lining—can be avoided.

You can now actually help Nature produce her own gentle, complete "daily" bowel movements—thanks to the patient study of 16 Scientists.

You see if waste matter in the colon isn't kept moist it becomes hard, dry, caked and results in constipation. These scientists discovered that a "little daily dose" of Kruschen actually keeps this waste matter moist, soft and easy to expel. Also acts as a mild antacid and kidney diuretic.

There is no nausea, no griping, no violence with Kruschen. Hospital tests report: "Kruschen can be taken for years without having to increase the dose." Inexpensive! Only a trifle for a jar that lasts weeks. Over 245,000,000 jars of Kruschen have been sold thruout the world. Kruschen must do the work!

BUILDING SLUMP SHOWN IN CITY IN 1ST QUARTER

Permits Issued in Period Disclose Construction Valuation of $264,825.

Reflecting a seasonal decline, building construction in Mansfield during the first quarter of 1940 totaled $264,825, a decrease of more than $200,000 from the valuations for the corresponding period a year ago, a survey of building permit records disclosed today.

Although first quarter valuations for 1939 totaled $698,321, two new schools constructed by the board of education accounted for $469,884 of that amount.

Other building for the three month period last year totaled $228,437, or approximately $36,000 less than the valuations for the first quarter of 1940.

The number of residences under construction so far this year was slightly less than last year, valuations in new home construction being down about $42,000 for this year.

Thirty-five permits have been taken out for new homes during the first three months of this year as compared with 45 that were started during the same period in 1939.

March building valuations this year - although $4,000 less than those of the same period last year were $27,000 ahead of February. Valuations last month totaled $103,150 as compared with $76,400 in February. Residential construction last month totaled $87,550.

WATERWORKS DEBT REDUCED

City Pays Off $5,410 in Bonds, Leaves Indebtedness Figure at $86,000.

Bonded indebtedness on the municipal waterworks dropped to a new low today as $5,410 was lopped off a debt figure of approximately $86,000.

This was shown in the records of City Auditor Paul L. Kelley who authorized the payment of $4,000 principal and $1,410 in interest charges.

Because city council has authorized only $61,000 in bonds to be issued for waterworks improvements in recent years, debt payments this year have decreased to the lowest in years, according to Kelley.

He pointed out that if council continues its practice of paying for improvements out of waterworks profits, and if no bonds are issued within the next five years, the utility will be debt-free by the end of 1945.

He said that with the retirement of two outstanding issues next year an additional $10,000 would be available for plant expansion. After 1945, a total of $50,000 should be available annually for department improvements, Kelley added, providing receipts remain on the same level and there are no unanticipated emergencies.

The second semi-annual debt payment by the city will be in September and October. At that time, approximately $16,000 more of the debt will be retired, reducing the outstanding figure to about $65,000.

Bonds still outstanding include part of a $42,000 issue in 1920 and a $20,000 issue in 1931 for extension; a $125,000 issue in 1927 for the Woodland reservoir, and a $64,000 issue in 1938 for a storage tank and main extensions.

There Are Two Ways to Get at Constipation

Yes, and only two ways. Relax and suffer! Or correct! Instead of enduring those dull tired headachy days and then having to take an emergency cathartic, why not EFFF regular with Kellogg's All-Bran? You can, if your constipation is the kind millions have—due to lack of "bulk" in the diet. For All-Bran goes right to the cause of this trouble by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this toasted, nutritious cereal regularly—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if your life isn't a whole lot brighter! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

Lewis Threatens Third Party as Wisconsin Ballots

NATION EYES PRIMARY FOR PARTY TREND

Labor Leader's Speech Causes Stir Among Politicians at Washington.

(By Associated Press)

The Wisconsin presidential primary took top place on the national political program today beside John L. Lewis's threat to organize a third party movement unless the Democrats choose a candidate and platform acceptable to labor and the common people.

The nation looked to the Wisconsin vote for some inkling on how Democrats feel about the third term question, and on how Senator Arthur Vandenberg (R-Mich) and Thomas E. Dewey, New York prosecutor, shape up as Republican presidential contenders.

Test Sentiment.

As both parties selected slates of 24 delegates for their National conventions, the Democratic side offered the first test of sentiment between President Roosevelt and Vice President Garner. The issue was not as clear cut as it might be, however, because there were two rival Roosevelt slates in the field against the one Garner ticket.

A big question was where supporters of the La Follette Progressive party would throw their strength. The law let them vote in either the Democratic or the Republican primary.

While politicians watched to see which way the political straws would blow in the Wisconsin winds, they speculated over John L. Lewis's statement yesterday at Monongah, W. Va., that he would summon, labor, youth, old age, negro and farmers' organizations to a convention of his own in the event Democrats failed to meet the conditions he laid down for action at their convention.

Speech Causes Stir.

The CIO leader's speech produced some stir in Washington, but prominent Democrats were inclined to discount its importance. Some spoke of it as a "trial balloon." Lewis already possesses the frame-work of a national political organization in labor's non-partisan league, which he heads.

Elsewhere the political news included New York's primary today for the selection of convention delegates, the entry of the name of Senator Taft (R-Ohio) in New Jersey where Dewey already has filed, a municipal election in Kansas City which may produce political signposts, and a hint from James Cromwell, minister to Canada, that he may run for the Democratic senatorial nomination in New Jersey.

The filing of Taft's name by petitions in New Jersey an hour before the midnight deadline last night did not assure a direct test of strength with Dewey. Taft has not permitted his name to be entered against Dewey's thus far in any state, and it would be possible for him to withdraw in New Jersey before the May 21 primary.

CRESTLINE—Mrs. Rachael A. Mowery, 91, Crestline's oldest woman resident, died Monday at 7:30 p. m. at the home of her niece, Mrs. William Roderick, 202 Livingston street, with whom she lived for the past 12 years. Up and Down THE STREET

If the lad lives up to his own words the Mansfield Braves are going to have a great moundsman on the hill this year. In the letter he sent to club officials inquiring about the rookie school opening here tomorrow the boy writes: Have a sizzling fast ball; a sharp-breaking curve; a wicked drop; a great change of pace and I can hit practically anything tossed at the plate. All I want is an opportunity. Manager Stover will be watching for the youth—but has his fingers crossed.

Washington, D. C. was a popular place for Mansfield school teachers to spend their spring vacation last week according to L. C. Baumgardner, teacher at Senior high school, who with Mrs. Baumgardner, a former teacher, visited the capital city. Baumgardner reports that while standing in line to go through the White House, he met three other Mansfield teachers, each group surprised to see the other there. In the second group were Miss Pearl Danbark of Senior high, Miss Anita Strauch of Hedges school and Miss Dora McLeod, primary music supervisor.

For many years there has been a need for dental equipment at the Mansfield General Hospital but due to budgets, boards, etc., the committees in charge have never come to a decision concerning this project. But there will no doubt be a dental room established there in the near future due to the receipt of chair, cabinet and other necessary equipment which the institution received today as a gift from the estate of the late Dr. John H. Bristor, Mansfield dentist.

If police had no other harbinger of spring there would be the first reports of broken windows by youthful ball players. It happens every year just about this time. On today's reports were two complaints of property damage, one on Helen avenue and one on Rowland avenue. The pitcher in both cases, had more enthusiasm than control and the balls went through windows. Police warned them that their back-lot games must not infringe on other people's property.

SEE TWO QUIT GOVERNOR RACE

Political Observers Believe Some Dems Will Withdraw in Favor of Davey, White.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—Reports were revived today that two or more candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination would withdraw from the contest. Names not withdrawn before Thursday night will appear on the May 14 primary ballot.

At present eight candidates, including former Governors George White and Martin L. Davey, are in the contest.

It was understood a movement has been under way to convince some of the other candidates to drop out to insure a victory for White over Davey.

Others in the contest are former Secretary of State William J. Kennedy, former Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy, former State Highway Director James R. Marker, former Congressman-at-Large Harold G. Mosier, and James Flynn and Frank Dye, attorneys.

Political observers pointed out that the movement is being pushed in behalf of White by Democratic leaders and followers who supported National Committeeman Charles Sawyer when he defeated Davey for the nomination in 1938.

SEVEN WITNESSES CALLED TO SUPPORT BATTISTA'S ALIBI

(By United Press)

CHARDON — Seven witnesses were to be called today to substantiate Joseph Battista's alibi that he was in Canton last Armistice day when Robert Fenwick, 31, Geauga county farmer, was wounded after ordering three hunters off his property.

Battista went on trial yesterday before Common Pleas Judge Harlan Sperry on a charge of shooting with intent to kill Fenwick. Battista waived trial by a jury.

Prosecutor Harold K. Bostwick rested the state's case after calling six witnesses.

Fenwick testified that he got a good look at the man who shot him and that Battista was the man.

Adolf Unger, former mayor of Tiffin, O., who is Battista's counsel, called four witnesses yesterday—Tony Battista, the defendant's brother; Victor Battista, 10, a nephew; Dominic Battista, no relation, and Dominic's wife, Stella.

All testified that Joseph was home Armistice day morning. Fenwick had testified that he was shot about 11:30 a. m.

Verne Pomeroy, of Canton, a state witness, told of a conversation in which Battista was jokingly referred to as the man who shot Fenwick. Pomeroy said the conversation took place in a beer parlor in the Milner hotel in Canton some time in January.

Justice of the Peace Howard Messenger of Auburn in whose office Battista was arraigned told of Battista starting to write something on a piece of paper and then tearing it up, saying, "I'm not going to write a confession."

CREW SETS FIRE TO SHIP, GERMAN SEA LOSSES UP

Scuttling of Vessel Brings to 303,946 Tons Losses by Capture, Sinking.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The British admiralty announced today that the German freighter Mimi Horn, out of Curacao, Netherlands West Indies, had been intercepted in "northern waters" by British men-of-war and then fired and scuttled by her own crew.

The admiralty announcement said the sinking brought to 303,946 tons Germany's merchant ship losses by capture and sinking. The Mimi Horn, whose port of registry was Hamburg, was a 4,007-ton vessel.

Losses to allied and neutral shipping for the week ending last Sunday midnight, meanwhile, were reported at 13,901 tons, the fourth lowest weekly figure since the start of the war and the lowest since the first week of 1940.

An informed source laid the decrease in allied and neutral shipping losses to the work of British minesweepers and to the fact that German submarines "think it unwise to attack convoys."

One of the vessels included in the list of losses for the week was the 5,742-ton British tanker Daghestan, which sank after being bombed by German aircraft off the north-east coast of Scotland.

The 5,439-ton freighter Barnhill, which was bombed and set on fire the preceding week, also is regarded now as a total loss.

The sinking of a German submarine which had torpedoed a neutral ship in convoy "some weeks ago" was described in an eye witness account made public through the ministry of information.

Three British destroyers, a French destroyer and a British flying boat dropped depth charges and bombs, forcing the submarine to the surface, it was said, and there it surrendered, fatally damaged.

All of the submarine crew were picked up, according to the British, except the commander who remained aboard his craft. The submarine then sank.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Excerpts From Miss Midnight's Diary.

Not since the heyday of Lillian Russell and Diamond Jim Brady (which I remember well) has the supper-club notion so captured the town's fancy as in this season, when the boites doing the most glittering business are those in which a fashionable fact is never seen until nigh onto the witching hour.

Weeks ago the Algonquin came through with the night club phenomenon of the year, and now the Brevoort Supper club, a new hit, is attracting celebrities and their satellites to the cozy basement of the traditionally austere Brevoort hotel.

Sunday night a good slice of Broadway traipsed down there for a pot pourri of impromptu entertainment. Eunice Healy and jitterbug Betty Hutton (who looks like a flapper cartoon come to life), Nancy Hamilton, Brenda Forbes and Richard Haydn performed at the drop of an Easter bonnet for an audience that included Dwight Fiske, Argentinita, Charlie Walters, Dorothy Fox and Hildegarde. Hildegarde was wearing a new hat which several gentlemen, who had seen many things in their day, simply refused to believe.

On Swing Street, practically simultaneously, the plush-walled and anachronistic Brown Derby was staging the premiere of a new kind of entertainment, starring Jack Waldron, that agile ad libber for the mob, who can make an audience of Broadwayites giggle if ever a man could.

Milton and Ma Berle came around to give an ear to the gags, songwriter Teddy Powell looked as cheerful as if he didn't have a torch song in his vest pocket, and Tony Canzoneri put up his dukes against nothing tougher than a lemonade.

Zazu Pitts had her mother out, too, over at La Conga, where they entertained a group of family friends, all considerably flustered over Diosa Costello's electric gyrations on the dance floor. Ilka Chase, a portrait of enameled chic, did the rhumba with a series of partners, like a belle at a Latin prom, and every step she took was recorded, presumably for posterity, by a cameraman who kept clicking away to the rhythm of the maracas.

Georgie Jessel and Lois Andrew, billing and cooing at their ringside table (which might have been the old parlor sofa, for all they cared), gave the floor show some real competition, because half the merrymakers lent an eye to the dance teams, but the other half did all its craning in the direction of the comedian and child bride-to-be. . . .

George Balanchine, whose Zorina is toiling in the Hollywood jute mills, faithfully ate his arroz con pollo solo.

The revival of "Liliom" brought out the standard first nighters, and a few extras. Those two decorative sisters, Helen Menken and Grace Menken (Mrs. Bert Lytell), paced the aisles in a flurry of chic. Major Bowes hovered attentively over his exotic-looking companion, and Jules Glaenzer and Edna Ferber rubbed elbows in the foyer. Isabel Leighton, the playwright, whose new drama has been bought by the Theatre Guild, appeared at intermission in a navy and white polka-dotted evening dress, the skirt of which was draped in the fashion of the best harems.

Afterward the crowd seemed to trek to the Algonquin Supper Club, where host Frank Case chuckled over the appearance of such interesting elbow-benders as Walter Huston, Roland Young, Ilka Chase, Phil Baker, Gene Raymond, and Anna Q. Nelson.

Margo, wearing her hair in unusual pigtails that stood out from each side of her head, went all through the evening without reconciling, or seeming to reconcile, with Francis Lederer, who was among the missing.

Mr. Case, who loves his little joke, said he had an idea on how to improve business on Monday nights, which is reputedly an evil evening in the night clubs. "I am announcing," he declared, "that as a boon to business Frank Case positively will not appear on Mondays."

It was difficult to sit in the Kit Kat without the aid of dark glasses, all because of the glow that was coming from Libby Holman's dress. Libby, accompanied by her husband, Ralph Holmes (who is a young man right out of an advertisement for dinner jackets) was dressed in a white evening gown trimmed with several pounds of bright gold sequins, and customers to her right and to her left were getting positively snow blind, or gold blind. Even Libby, didn't apparently, see her husband's brother, Philips Holmes, who is just back from Europe and was sitting in the Kit Kat's bar all the time.

Tony Martin was there, too, with beautiful Ann Graham, but he was quoted by a friend as saying, "I'm going back to the coast in two weeks and if Alice will have me, I'll go back to her."

Colbert's had a handsome-looking dinner crowd, with the Bert Lytells and Helen Menken, Philip Reed, Shelia Barrett and Ben Bernie. Miss Barrett's hat, I thought, resembled one of Colbert's extra-fancy lobsters; Mr. Bernie, I was pleased to notice, did not even relinquish his cigar while eating. I am not trying to say the procedure of eating and smoking was simultaneous, but it was as close to it as I ever expect to see.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—That triumph of trickery, "Dr. Cyclops," taught Albert Dekker a few tricks too. Dekker never may use them again, but he has them down pat.

He knows how to talk to people who aren't there.

Dekker, as the mad scientist who learned how to "reduce" normal human beings to toy size, and had a lot of macabre fun in the process, worked six months on the picture. The rest of the cast was with him only three weeks. Yet on the screen the whole cast is seen together practically throughout the picture. Dekker, life-size, exchanges dialogue with the others, toy-size. He picks up one of them in the hollow of his hand.

Some of the scenes were done with gigantic props, to make life-size actors seem dolls by contrast. Many were done by rear-projection photography, the little people previously photographed and projected into the scenes with Dekker, the composite being filmed.

All this had to be figured out mathematically by Director Ernest Schoedsack and his force. The pieces had to be fitted together more intricately than any jigsaw puzzle. It was Dekker's job, then, to fit his every move into the whole without crossing up the plans.

He could not set down a book or a coffee cup without knowing exactly where he should place it in relation to what already had been shot. He figuratively had to toe marks, with every action, when the marks were invisible.

With all this, he needn't have bothered too much with his characterization, but he did—and it's my contention that, interesting as the trick photography is, Dekker's acting is more so.

I went out to see him on "Horrow Row" — so-named because Bela Lugosi lives a few doors from the Dekker house. A less terrifying person couldn't have been planted there: Albert Van Dekker, late of the New York stage, was taking a plump two-year-old sprite named Jana, his daughter, for a walk.

I found him very cheerful about the whole thing although for three years he has been in town looking for a "break" that didn't come until "Strange Cargo" and "Dr. Cyclops." The Dekkers, he related philosophically, were broke frequently, but he worked often enough, at long intervals, to keep them going.

When he left Bowdoin college, intending to study psychiatry, he undertook the theater on urging of a friend, and he made a good go of it. He always had expected to come to Hollywood with a contract, and carfare paid. But that didn't materialize, so he took an agent's offer of $500 (to cover expenses) and came out.

A month later, he had a small part in "The Great Garrick." Then the pickings were lean. Jana arrived, and the matter became serious. Her parents were set to return east when a friend talked them out of it, offered them free use of a one-room apartment, and they stuck it out.

Young Talent To Fight For Place On Club

Three Mansfielders Among Group to Start Training In Braves' Rookie School Wednesday.

By CHARLES MARTIN

A TRIO of Mansfielders and talent from Bellville, Shiloh, Crestline, Ashland, Galion and Nova comprise a portion of the small army of youngsters invading Blue Goose field at 8 a. m. Wednesday for the opening session of the Mansfield Braves' rookie school.

With Manager Dewey Stover on hand to teach the fundamentals of the game, some 60 ambitious lads from far and near start battling for berths on the Braves' squad during spring training.

Gene Yarmon Dale Leedy and Ben Colopy are the Mansfield boys, while Russ Sheriff comes from Bellville, the Dawson twins, Dean and Fred, represent Shiloh, and heading the Ashland brigade is Harley Freer.

Crestline sends the famed Crestline high "touchdown" twins, Bob Frye, and Phil Ganni. These two lads gained considerable attention from their wild gridiron tactics last fall.

Leedy, who played a part of the season with the Braves in the Ohio State league last year, has moved to Mansfield and is determined to win a spot on the club.

Another Edwards makes his appearance in the Braves' wigwam tomorrow. He is Paul, brother of Hank, who performed in left field for the Mansfield club last season and won the individual batting championship in the Ohio State league.

John England of Mt. Gilead, who the past two years has been the young end of a father-son battery, will try for a place on the hurling corps.

Stover will hold workouts every day at Blue Goose field. If rain makes it impossible to hold the sessions there they will move to the Armory.

Larry Scott, Braves' groundkeeper, has the Blue Goose field in good shape and as soon as the rookies take over the diamond he will devote his time to getting the Fairground ready for the opener against the Lima Pandas Wednesday night May 1.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

NEW YORK (UP)—A fellow forgets to bolt and bar his door on All Fools' day and the next thing you know a red-headed prizefighter with a glare in his eye and a grievance in his voice is knocking out Joe Louis over by the wastepaper basket.

* * * * *

Red Burman was my uninvited visitor. He came in without a knock but before I could get him out he had put the knock on Jack Dempsey, who owns part of his contract; on Max Waxman, who manages him; Promoter Mike Jacobs; Heavyweight Champion Louis, and such assorted innocents as Arturo Godoy, Bob Pastor, Billy Conn, Tommy Farr and Johnny Paychek.

* * * * *

The verbal fight Burman waged with Louis, and which saw him lift the title in two rounds, was one of the fiercest encounters of all time. With Louis not present and so unable to come to his own defense, Burman all but killed him.

McLemore

"There," Burman cried as he struck a pose for imaginary photographers. "There is what I can do to Louis whenever they let me have a shot at him. Only I don't think there'd even be any second round. He's a sucker for my kind of fighting."

"You mean this kind of fighting—up in an office building at noon, with Louis in Detroit?" I ventured to ask from the working press seat on the window sill I had taken when the fight started.

"Naw," the hedhead said, "right in a ring, with just me and him going at it. But they won't give me a chance. They bring in a bum like Paychek and he is so scared he can't even hold his hands up. And they talk about letting Conn fight for the title, when everybody knows he couldn't hurt his sister with a stick, and is so skinny Louis would bust him apart with one punch."

It must be a tranquil domestic scene indeed when Burman, Dempsey and Waxman get together to talk business. Burman has no use for either one of them.

"That Dempsey could do me a lot of good if he wanted to, but try to get a hold of him. He's too busy with that night club and restaurant of his to bother with me. The time he gets through making up what they gonna serve for dinner and shaking hands and signing autographs and flying all over hell to referee fights and wrestling matches, it's winter again."

What about Manager Waxman? Doesn't he have the best interests of his fighter at heart and bound from bed with the sun to further his cause?

* * * * *

"Yeah, Waxman bounds all right, but he bounds at a racing form to get his parlays lined up. He's horse crazy. Maybe if I was a three-year-old mudder he'd pay me more mind. It ain't helping any to have Dempsey and Mike Jacobs sore at one another. Not when Mike runs boxing the way he does."

* * * * *

Burman gave me a rather full description of his life, but I will omit his early youth and schooling, and his summer vacations with various aunts and uncles, and simply tell you that he is the only man ever to knock out Buddy Knox, who he says is much tougher than Fort Knox, that he beat Eddie Blunt who gave Galento a tremendous struggle, that he has beaten Steve Dudas, a conqueror of Bob Pastor, and that he holds a decision over one Edouardo Primo, a select Argentine beef who once licked Godoy. Also, he has beaten Farr.

So, you see what a fellow gets from leaving his door unlocked.

'Hun' Defeats Heffner In Disputed Match at Armory

MILLING about the door of "Heinie the Hun's" dressing room, a handful of irate wrestling fans last night demanded justice for their idol, Jimmy Heffner, the Texas light-heavy.

The melee followed the deciding fall of Tim Nolan's weekly feature match between Heffner and "the Hun." Heinie had won the first fall in 18 minutes after a series of flying mares and body slam, and Heffner had taken the second stanza in about 2 minutes with his Indian choker grip.

After grappling about 4 minutes of the third heat, Referee Frank Grashel of Cleveland ordered "the Hun" to break one of his illegal grips, but Heinie only partially broke the hold and when Grashel turned his back Heinie turned Heffner into the crab hold and Jimmie immediately gave the fall to "the Hun."

The handful of fans immediately demanded Referee Grashel continue the match but "the Hun" retired to his dressing room and refused to continue. The appearance of a local police officer soon convinced the fans the show was over.

Al Szasz, Hungarian grappler and a new face in local circles, defeated "Buzz" Jones of Colorado in the semi-final.

After Jones had taken the first fall in 8 minutes, Szasz won the second heat in 4 minutes with the kangaroo kick, and the winning stanza in 12 minutes with the double leg grapevine, a grip which is well named.

Mansfield's Bob Steele met the toughest competition of his career last night in the person of Gus Johnson of Minneapolis. Considering the odds against him, 2 feet in height, and 25 pounds in weight, Bob didn't do so badly, as he grappled the Swedish giant to a 30-minute draw.

Frank Grashel, the new referee, handled all the bouts in good shape, excepting the last fall of the Heffner-Hun bout, and considering the fact that he had never officiated with the Hun in the ring before, we think he kept the match cleaner than any previous official.

Favor Shorter Schedules For High Schools

Ohio Principals and Superintendents Overwhelmingly Vote for Reduced Sports Programs.

By JIM EMERSON

COLUMBUS—(UP)—Ohio high school principals and superintendents went on record today overwhelmingly in favor of shorter football and basketball schedules beginning in 1941.

They also opposed by a proportion of nearly 4 to 1 the playing of post-season or bowl football games.

Their sentiments were disclosed in a poll conducted by the Ohio High School Athletic association which is considering an official referendum to place a top limitation on the number of football and basketball games in which a team may participate.

Simultaneously, Commissioner H. R. Townsend revealed that attendance and receipts at this year's county, sectional and district basketball tournaments shattered all previous records along with the state meet figures announced earlier.

Aggregate attendance for all the tourneys this year was 440,545 while receipts totaled $162,095. Last year the combined totals were 398,790 attendance and $138,069 receipts.

On the basis of the poll, the average school administrator favored a nine-game football schedule and 16 to 18 games in basketball during the regular season.

The school officials also voted against the selection of all-star teams in both sports and said they favored a rule whereby each school would be held responsible if any of its boys played in all-star games that might come under the ban of the association. The latter vote was 237 yes, 125 no.

Townsend said that 396 ballots were received from the football questionnaire which was sent only to the 470 schools competing in the sport. There were 855 replies to the basketball poll which covered 1,147 schools.

Results of football schedule limitation: eight-game season, 140, nine-game season, 185; 10-game season, 54; more than ten, 8.

The administrators were about evenly divided on an opening date for football in 1941. Sept. 12 was favored by 179 and Sept. 19 by 197.

On the post season or bowl game question, there were 76 for, and 300 against.

Results of the basketball schedule limitation: less than 16-game schedule, 165, 16-game, 308, 18-game, 219, 20-game, 139; more than 20-game, 14.

Townsend asked the schools how many basketball games each had played this year outside of tournament contests.

The answers, 10 games or less, 14, 11 games, 17, 12 games, 29; 13 games, 42, 14 games, 115; 15 games, 115; 16 games, 157; 17 games 92, 18 games, 120; 19 games 56; 20 games, 62; 21 games, 13, 22 games, 11; more than 22 games 7. (One team played 28 games and one only two games.)

Other questions and answers: "Do you favor all-star basketball teams?" yes, 119; no, 592. "Do you favor all-star football team?" yes, 66; no, 310.

Townsend said the state board probably would meet next month to consider the results of the poll. If finally voted in formal referendum of the association membership, the changes would become effective in September, 1941.

Hold High School Cage Tourney a Week Later.

COLUMBUS—(UP)—The 1941 state high school basketball tournament will be held March 20-21-22 in the state fairgrounds coliseum and Ohio State gymnasium, Commissioner H. R. Townsend of the Ohio High School Athletic association announced today. Inasmuch as there is no Easter conflict, next year's classic will take place nearly a week later than the corresponding dates for this year. County meets for 1941 have been set for Feb. 21-22 and Feb. 28-March 1; sectional meets, March 6-7-8, and district meets, March 13-14-15.

SHOW PICTURES OF STATE GRID GAMES AT DINNER

Motion pictures of the Ohio State-Michigan and Ohio State-Minnesota football games will be shown when Butler high honors its grid and cage squads at a banquet in the high school cafeteria Friday night. Atty. John L. Catlett, Mansfield, will be the toastmaster. Guest speakers are Jim Hull and Tippy Dye, former Buckeye stars. Coach Paul Snyder of Mansfield high will be a guest of honor. The dinner is scheduled to start at 7.

Grimes Joins Indian Squad

Expects to Be in Lineup Within a Week.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. – (U.P.) Oscar Grimes, crack infielder, joined the Cleveland Indians today, appearing well on the way to recovery from a knee operation. He was expected to be in playing condition within a week or so.

Ray Mack, filling the second base position for the Indians, got three singles yesterday at Thomasville, Ga., where the Indians lost to the New York Giants, 8 to 6.

In the last three games, Mack has hit an even .500 against good pitching.

Beau Bell hit a home run for Cleveland yesterday with Campbell on base. Ben Chapman also homered and the Indians put on a three-run rally in the ninth.

* * *

Willis Hudlin was the losing pitcher. He gave up four runs in the first.

* * *

Ken Keltner of the Indians said today he would not change his batting style of last year for that of 1938, when he hit 26 home runs.

"I can do more good by controlling my swings," he said.

FAINT RALLYING SIGNALS APPEAR IN STOCK MART

A Few Steels, Aircrafts Tilt Upward; Clouds Envelop Many Leaders.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Faint rallying signals appeared in the stock market today but clouds continued to envelope many leaders.

A few steels and aircrafts tilted forward fractions to around a point after the opening. Dealings slackened near the second hour.

Selective improvement appeared in the bond department. Commodities were a trifle uneven. European securities markets maintained a fairly steady course.

Good and bad developments of the industrial front were about evenly divided.

Among items studied by market anaylsts were:

Most New York City banks reported cash, deposits and total resources at peak levels for the first quarter.

Trade observers forecast a brighter outlook for the principal rubber manufacturing companies in the second quarter, due partly to new tire sales programs.

Chairman Weir of the National Steel Corp. expressed the belief mill operations had about reached their low mark and should remain between 60 and 70 per cent of capacity until the end of the second quarter.

Business loans of Federal Reserve Weekly reporting banks in 101 cities showed an increase of $4,000,000 for the week ended March 27.

BLACK HITS AT JUSTICE COURTS

Patrol Chief Tells Safety Seminar J. P.'s Deterrent to Law Enforcement.

than to "haul the motorist out of his car and give him a going over when it is probable that he has only made a mistake."

Denouncing roadside speed traps, Black said a partial correction had been accomplished through the operation of a law which went into effect last August requiring constables who serve out of a justice court to wear police uniforms and have properly marked automobiles.

"At least the motorist knows he is being stopped by an officer now, and doesn't think he is being held up," Black commented.

Speaking earlier in the sessions, Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker corporation and head of the Automotive Safety foundation, asserted that prime responsibility for traffic safety rests with enforcement.

Police departments need new techniques and trained personnel for traffic regulation, he declared and hit hard at ticket fixing. "Don't think it is only the police who fix tickets," he warned. "Suspension of sentence is ticket fixing by the court."

Lieut. F. M. Kreml, director of the Northwestern University Traffic institute and a former motorcycle patrolman, said traffic law enforcement has failed largely because police departments have conducted a series of "drives" against violators and have lacked intelligent long-range enforcement programs.

Part of the blame for this condition, he said, goes to a public which does not back up the chief of police and which permits the department to be ill-equipped.

Between a fourth and a third of the total police force should be assigned to traffic duty, he declared, and that number should represent about four men to each 10,000 population.

"There ought to be ten times as many convictions for 'moving' accidents as there are persons killed or injured in a given period, if your police department is efficient," Kreml declared. "And there should be at least 80 and possibly 90 per cent convictions in the total number of traffic cases."

The seminar continues through Wednesday.

Drastic changes in the Ohio driver-licensing law were being proposed today at a meeting of the executive committee of the Ohio Traffic Safety council in the state office building. Among the proposals were:

Make provision for mandatory revocation (of driver's license) upon conviction for certain serious offenses; establish an initial examination and application fee of $1; establish a minimum age limit of 18 years with specially restricted licenses for children between the ages of 14 and 16; do away with chauffeur's badges; protect drivers by providing appeal to courts; and require that reports of accidents be filed under names of drivers.

THEATERS

Dean Jagger, a native of Columbus Grove, O., 32 years of age, has been signed to play the title role in "Brigham Young," the epic tale of the Mormon migration and settlement in a Utah wilderness. Jagger, a noted figure on the Broadway stage for almost ten years, recently completed a successful run in the George Abbott production "The Unconquered." Previously he had co-starred with Ethel Barrymore. This original story "Brigham Young," was written by Louis Bromfield . . .

Stark Realism.

To get the deep human realism he wanted, Director John Ford banned all make-up for "The Grapes of Wrath," the picture now showing at the Ohio theater. He instructed Gwen Wakeling, famed Hollywood designer who was assigned to costume the picture, to issue only old and authentic "Okie" clothing to the players. Even the leading players were photographed without benefit of glamorizing lights. The Joad family is presented as the real people they seemed in the book by John Steinbeck.

Rogers and Astaire.

Showing at the Majestic Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will be "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle," with Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire in the leading roles. The co-feature is "I Am the Law," with Edward G. Robinson having the principal role. This presents Robinson in an entirely new characterization, far removed from his famous gangster roles.

"Eternally Yours."

With Loretta Young and David Niven starred as the romantic team in the new comedy romance "Eternally Yours," a new plot is unfolded. This picture and "British Intelligence" are showing at the Ritz theater Wednesday and Thursday. The latter has Boris Karloff and Margaret Lindsay in the leading roles. PENNSY AREAS FEAR 'REPEAT' OF FLOOD IN 1936 persons accepted Red Cross aid, became the nerve of the flood relief set-up. Wilkes-Barre, neighboring Kingston and Plymouth across the river, and Sunbury have suffered most so far. Harrisburg, the state capital, and other towns farther downstream expected their highest levels today.

At least six persons were known dead. Estimates of homeless ranged as high as 25,000. None ventured to hazard an estimate of property damage. However, veteran rivermen said that most communities and relief agencies were better prepared for the emergency than during the 1936 flood and that property damage probably would be less.

EARLY CREST FOR OHIO

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Flood waters which unleashed their fury in the east surged menacingly down the Ohio today but the river was expected to reach an early crest in this district before causing further damage.

Although still rising at the rate of three-tenths of a foot an hour, the water was mostly within its dikes.

After flooding a section of Pittsburgh before reaching a crest, the river rose to 36 feet in Steubenville, one foot above flood stage, and then started to recede.

Lowland roads in eastern Ohio were under water, including state route 7 north of Steubenville, and at Mingo Junction. Marietta merchants, fearful of flood waters, moved stocks as the river swelled toward a predicted 35 feet.

Danger diminished at Cincinnati with word of the upstream crests. "Unless there are further rains we don't expect the river to reach flood stage here," John Van Orsdall, weather observer, said.

The river was slightly over 33 feet here but the flood stage at Cincinnati, throughout most of this section, and at Huntington, W. Va., is over the 50-foot mark.

The weather bureau expected a crest here of 45 feet Thursday, but receding water upstream indicated to rivermen that the peak might be sooner.

An offer for help was sent by Acting Mayor Andrew Broaddus of Louisville, to flood ravaged Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where the Susquehanna rose to nine feet above flood stage and drove thousands from their homes.

"The city of Louisville remembers too well the help you sent us in 1937," Broaddus said.

THRILLS MUSIC LOVERS IN CITY

Swarthout's Talent, Beauty and Charm Displayed to 1,400 at Concert.

home life and Miss Swarthout is very definite when you ask her if she knows anything about cooking or house work. "I don't know beans about cooking," she admits candidly. But then no one would ever expect a gal who looks like Gladys to be able to whip up a batch of biscuits. She is an authority on the results of good cooking, and her streamline figure is not maintained on a Melba toast-bullion. In fact, she eats everything except the "gooey" things.

Incidentally, that lovely medieval gown, with its fullness about the waist and sleeves, was made by Valentina, who does all of the Swarthout costumes.

That her motion picture career, unsatisfactory as it was, added very materially to her success, Miss Swarthout admits. She made five pictures and all of them came under the inelegant heading of "stinkeroos." She says so herself. But they widened her audiences immeasurably. And she still hopes to do one or two musicals that will give her a fair chance.

Something like a groan went over the audience last night when Rev. D. N. Roller, who introduced her, announced that she would give no autographs after the concert. There's a reason and it isn't temperment. When an artist gives as many concerts as she does, and several hundred people demand autographs at each one, it runs into killing work. And then there is the danger of catching cold from the admirers who crowd around her.

Miss Swarthout was very generous last night with her encores, and as usual, it was the encores that drew the greatest enthusiasm from the audience. No other number displayed the beauty and range of her voice as did Mallott's "The Lord's Prayer," which was her final encore. The loveliest of her songs was "My Lagan Love" by Harty, and it seemed to this listener at least, that her lower notes have a quality that are more —shall we say, thrilling—than her higher ones.

The aria from "Mignon," which she had done with the Metropolitan a number of times, was, of course, the highlight of her program. The very simplicity of her interpretation, plus a refreshing voice, makes the aria something that it never was in the days of the plump and heavy opera singers.

A depth of emotion feeling is sensed in her interpretation of the three songs of the Auvergne, especially arranged for her by Canteloube, and in her last group of songs there was that fine touch of dramatics which is so necessary to a successful concert. "Into the Night" by Clara Edwards, and "My Lagan Love" brought a tremendous appreciation from her audience. Among her encores was a lovely bit, "Never the Nightingale," written especially for her by John Sacco. It was the first time she had sung it and it is Sacco's first published song. She sang "Comin' Thru The Rye" with a coquetish charm and understanding.

Miss Swarthout's accompanist, Lester Hodges, came very nearly giving a concert of his own. He played two numbers, the Ramble on the Love Duet from "Der Rosenkavalier" and "Love of Three Oranges" and proved that he was a concert pianist as well as an accompanist. His encore was Poulnec's "Pastourelle," the very simplicity of which was intricate.

During the intermission Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, president of the Civic Music association, announced that this is the week of the annual membership drive and invited all of the past year's members to renew their memberships.

The annual dinner for workers will be held at 6:30 p. m. today at the John Simpson Junior high school cafeteria.

what he called the German "double standard of neutrality."

As for the prospective tightening of the blockade against Germany, Chamberlain said that "His Majesty's ships have already taken certain practical steps to interfere with the unimpeded passage of German cargo ships from Scandinavia." Still other measures are under consideration, he said.

Shipments of Swedish iron ore by way of Norway and Norwegian coastal waters to Germany has been troubling the British.

"If we are to bring this war to a close with the least possible destruction and dislocation . . . we must deprive Germany of materials most essential for prosecution of her aggressive policy, the prime minister said.

Reynaud's Cabinet Faces New Test.

PARIS — (AP) — Premier Paul Reynaud's "push the war" government faced a new test of confidence as the chamber of deputies reassembled today amid developments seemingly indicative of an allied diplomatic offensive aimed at Germany's neutral neighbors.

Political observers expected the premier, who barely won support of an absolute majority in his first appearance before the chamber March 22, to open this afternoon's session with a general statement announcing the allied war council's decision to tighten the blockade against Germany as a result of its meeting in London last Thursday.

Whether Reynaud's statement would be followed by a general policy debate and a confidence vote was expected to hinge on last minute political strategy.

Some observers believed that Reynaud might try to strengthen his majority with a new vote of confidence.

On his first test in the chamber Reynaud received only one vote more than an absolute majority, with 268 deputies in favor, 156 against and 111 abstaining. Changes announced later in the official journal boosted his majority to 17, with 277 for, 153 against and 107 abstaining.

The new government's apparent determination to pursue a more vigorous diplomatic policy designed to tighten the blockade against Germany was reflected in a continuing series of conferences which brought French envoys hurrying home to Paris.

Pelley Accused of Treason by Attempting Revolt

EFFORT MADE TO WIN ARMY IN REBELLION

Silver Shirt Leader 'Lied' to House Committee, Says Former Chairman.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—William Dudley Pelley, leader of the anti-semitic silver shirts, was accused today of conniving with United States army officers "to lead a revolt to overthrow this government.

The accusation was made by Rep. Dickstein (D) N. Y., who appeared as a witness before the Dies committee.

"I charge Pelley with treason against the United States," Dickstein declared. "I have documents to prove he was tied up with army officers.

"I charge from my documents that he and some army men planned to lead a revolt against this government."

Dickstein, who once headed a house subcommittee investigating subversive activities in 1934, said that he had data that "Pelley was recruiting and arming army men."

Pelley Arrested.

Pelley himself, after being sought for a year, testified before the Dies committee and then was arrested on charges of violating his parole on a North Carolina "Blue Sky" law conviction.

Dickstein said his charges were substantiated by Miss Dorothy Waring, blond former member of the silver shirts. Miss Waring, modishly clad in a fur coat with a corsage of violets, sat nearby waiting to testify.

Dickstein declared that Pelley, "did not tell the committee everything he should have" during his testimony.

The New Yorker said he had accumulated an extensive dossier bearing on the activities of the asserted anti-semitic chieftain.

Dickstein said most of his documents were taken in 1934 from the silver shirt headquarters in Ashville, N. C., by his subcommittee.

He said when Pelley testified last fall before the present committee he tried to find these old documents and was unable to locate them. Since then, he said, he looked them up and studied them.

Rep. Kramer (D) Calif., who, as a member of the 1934 committee, sent investigators to Ashville to seize the documents, testified to identify them.

"Pelley had an arsenal in San Diego, Calif., from which the army recovered stolen rifles and ammunition," Kramer declared. "When he told this committee his organization was non-military, he was deliberately lying."

FLOOD OF BILLS FINDS WAY INTO COUNCIL HOPPER

Street Improvements, Water Extensions Come Before Lawmakers Tonight.

—The city's legislative hopper was filled to the brim today with a flood of last minute legislation including three major pieces of business scheduled to come before council for action tonight.

Council Clerk William J. Beer, jr., said the docket was the heaviest on record so far this year.

The major issues are two measures authorizing a $13,000 street and water improvement program, representing the city's 1940 improvements in these two departments.

Another ordinance, one which is expected to be given only a first reading, calls for the licensing of all bicycles in Mansfield.

Recommended by council's street committee, the 1940 street program includes the grading and graveling of five streets in southwest part of the city. Total cost of the improvements is estimated at $9,000.

They are Barnard avenue from Marion to Euclid avenue, Lind avenue from Ohio to Albert street, Albert street from Lind to Venum avenue, Poplar street from Ohio to Sloan avenue, and Sloan avenue from Poplar to Bartley evenue.

Water main extensions estimated at $4,000 include the laying of pipe on sections of Overlook road, Fairlawn avenue, Marlow road, Yale drive, Greenlawn avenue, Winwood drive, Superior street, East Raleigh avenue, Andover road and Coleman road.

Aimed at halting the thefts of bicycles, an ordinance to license and regulate an estimated 3,000 bicycles in Mansfield, will be given a first reading, Arthur L. Croak, chairman of a special committee which has had the proposal under advisement said.

In addition council will also receive a score of claims for damages and petitions for various city improvements.

TAX REPEAL

Promised by Davey In Bid for Governorship.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Former Gov. Martin L. Davey, one of eight candidates seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination at the May 14 primary, today promised he would repeal the state sales tax if he becomes chief executive again.

(The sales tax law originally was passed as an emergency measure for one year during the administration of former Gov. George White, one of Davey's opponents in the primary. It was reenacted and made permanent during Davey's first term Dec. 30, 1936. During his second term it was amended to exempt foods.)

"The sales tax was passed before I became governor," Davey explained. "I am not attempting to blame my predecessor for passing the sales tax because it may have been necessary as an emergency measure."

"However, the sales tax continues to be obnoxious and annoying."

REDS URGING G-MAN PROBE IN PROTESTS

Nationwide Campaign Disclosed as Form Letters Flood Washington.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Evidence that the Communist-led campaign against J. Edgar Hoover and the Federal Bureau of Investigation has been organized on a nation-wide basis was disclosed today as the Department of Justice and congress were flooded with scores of "form" letters, telegrams and resolutions.

Strikingly similar in wording, the protests all called for an investigation of the G-men, and hit at President Roosevelt and Attorney-General Robert H. Jackson for failure to suspend the FBI head.

The resolutions were principally from Communist "front" organizations, although a number of them were from CIO labor unions. In the main, they charged that "there is every evidence to believe that J. Edgar Hoover is preparing for a repetition of the shameful Palmer raids" and called for a congressional inquiry.

(Editor's Note:—The so-called Palmer "raids" were conducted by Attorney-General Mitchell Palmer under the Wilson administration shortly after the formation of the Communist party in this country in 1919.)

Meanwhile, the Dies committee had evidence placed before it purporting to incorporate secret instructions given out by the Communist party's political committee. In memo form, it read:

Make It Hot.

"The party feels that this is the right time to make it very uncomfortable for Hoover and Jackson and Roosevelt. We are going to make it so hot for them, that they will forget about the war, about the Communist party—they will be busy saving their necks.

"We will send up such a flood of demands for investigation of the FBI that every senator, every congressman and even Jackson, himself, will be compelled to do something about it.

"We decided not only to send individual demands, we will also canvass trade unions and all kinds of progressive organizations throughout the country asking them to demand an investigation of the FBI."

The memo added that the instructions, dated early in March, were forwarded to all state committees of the party.

Liberty Violation.

The attack on Hoover, centering mainly on charges that he and his G-men have been violating "civil liberties," was first launched by the "Daily Worker" and the "New Masses," official Communist publications. It did not, however, achieve any wide circulation until Sen. Norris (I) Neb., wrote a letter to Jackson asking for an explanation. In reply to this and a subsequent letter from Norris, the attorney-general completely exonerated Hoover and the FBI of the charges.

Meanwhile, the firm that publishes the Daily Worker faced a state department investigation. It registered yesterday with the department under the act requiring registration of foreign agents, but at the same time denied it was a foreign agent.

It was reported that the departments division of controls intends to ask the firm to explain why it registered, if it contends it is not a foreign agent.

Religious Workers Complete Study, Plan Sessions Next Year.

Credit cards with the International Council of Religious Education were presented to 64 Mansfield and Richland county church workers at the final session of the Mansfield Bible Study and Leadership Training school in the Central Methodist church last night.

Those who received credit for their work at the school were required to attend all ten sessions of the school which began Jan. 29. Courses offered included the study of the Bible, and were all approved by the International Council of Religious Education.

The school's faculty was headed by Rev. Willis E. Ronk, dean of the Ashland college seminary.

Enrollment in this year's school was 107, according to Rev. Charles F. Sheriff, pastor of St. Matthew's Lutheran church, who served as dean of the school. The school was sponsored jointly by the Y. M. C. A. and the City Sunday School Superintendent's association, with Ralph B. Chapman as chairman of the administration committee. According to present plans the school will be held again next year, Chapman said today.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, APRIL 2, 1910.

"No comment," says Sumner Welles in response to questions—thus evidencing FBI training of which he hadn't previously been suspected.

Some of those California ham-and-eggers have reduced their proposal from "$30 every Thursday" to $20 per week—and being handed a couple of dollars every noon might satisfy at least a few of them.

Some Changes For the Better

THOSE who express concern over antics of the present generation of young people might well take a look around for a few of the evidences of progress in sane behavior that has marked the past several decades.

If you are past fifty, for instance, and are inclined to be rather sharply critical of some of the things that are going on nowadays, here are a few things for you to think about.

Did you notice that April Fool day passed yesterday with practically none of the asinine pranks which you will recall as having been prevalent when you were a child, but which have gradually declined in recent years until they are now quite definitely restricted to moronic types?

And have you also stopped to think that the so-called "comic" valentine, of a generation ago—intended to hurt, incense or insult the recipient—has almost entirely drifted out of use, and that valentines and other forms of greetings are now confined very largely to expressions of interest and friendship?

Then there is the noticeable improvement in Halloween observance, which has been transformed from a previous city-wide orgy of rowdyism and property damage into a supervised community activity, with legitimate entertainment and wholesome fun providing a harmless outlet for youthful exuberance of spirit.

Not to be forgotten in the improvement list is present-day saneness of Fourth of July observance, in contrast to the widespread use of dangerous fireworks and explosives by children and adults up to a decade ago, when frightful accidents and many deaths were regarded as a necessary part of proper recognition of Independance day.

A radically changed attitude toward college hazing, with considerable reduction in the physical torture and mental anguish once regarded as an essential part of "higher education" must also have a place among evidenced trends toward more civilized behavior.

So, if you have been inclined to be pessimistic, don't overlook the fact that there is also some justification for optimism.

Private Investments Necessary

REGARDING the economic situation in the United States, John T. Flynn, New York economist, expresses interesting views. He says: "We have here a country abounding in resources, a technological endowment equalled nowhere, directing brains capable of producing all we require, unlimited cash and credit, no foreign enemies. Yet some force, some invisible energy, holds us back from using all this to make ourselves prosperous."

He points out, as many others have done, that mere borrowing and spending of public money can't do it, that the important thing is to revive private investment.

If this cannot be done spontaneously, as it used to be after depressions, bankers may be driven to assume positive leadership in solving this problem. They cannot prosper themselves when their vaults become choked with funds that nobody wants to borrow and "risk" in business investments, as has always been done in normal times. For their own benefit and the public benefit, vast funds now inactive should be drawn into productive enterprise as quickly as possible.

Unprejudiced Views Needed

SOME time ago it was proposed that a new canal be built in Pennsylvania and Ohio. Strong objection against this plan appeared and President Roosevelt referred the matter to the interstate commerce commission. The commission issued an exhaustive factual report, and rejected the proposal as being unnecessary, as dangerous to the welfare of other carriers, particularly the railroads, which serve the area, and as being of possible benefit to only a few large shippers.

It would be a splendid idea if the commission were empowered to make a similar study of the long proposed St. Lawrence canal, which is now being actively sponsored both here and in Canada. So far debate on the St. Lawrence project has been largely political in character — comparatively little unprejudiced attention has been given to its economic and social aspects, or its effect on heavily-taxed existing private industry. The canal would cost hundreds of millions. Untold millions would be required for annual maintenance. And all that money would have to come out of the pockets of the general taxpayer.

Water transportation is dependent on the whims of Nature—a canal may be out of service when most needed. And in very few instances has any waterway been of service to the small shipper.

Under any circumstances, the overburdened taxpayers should not be forced to sink more billions in water transport until it has been thoroughly approved by an unprejudiced body.

Preparedness at Lower Cost

ARGUMENT as to whether American airplane factories should go into mass production of war planes for the Allies is being presented along practical lines.

Army and navy experts say it's the best way to insure capacity production of up-to-date planes for ourselves, in case we are threatened with war. The factories and production methods and plane models will be ready, and we may be saved a billion dollars or so. General Hugh Johnson, who was in charge of supplies for the World war, says that such mass-production equipment and experience is better preparedness than thousands of finished planes that would quickly grow obsolete.

"If war threatens us," he says, "we will take all this newly developed factory capacity for our own use. This policy will speed our essential production, put us in the vanguard of invention and design and very greatly lower our costs."

With memory unimpaired, a Texas hospital patient, acknowledging a gift of brandied peaches, says he appreciates "the spirit in which they were sent."

Maybe you shouldn't swap horses in the middle of the stream—but a nightmare should be disposed of as quickly as possible.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

ABOARD the Forty Niner—On a junket like this you have a lot of time to reflect on the nature of movie publicity and its growth in recent years, and also time to talk to some of the old-timers—if anyone can be called an old timer in a young industry.

They recall the days of the Nickelodeon and the Penny Arcade, when movies consisted of knives and forks moving on tables without any visible reason and when movies consisted of The Great Train Robbery. In those days, no publicity was necessary, for there was only a curiosity-seeking public for pictures. People went to the movies then the way people today go to La Guardia Airport—but in much fewer numbers.

ADOLPH ZUKOR was one of the first men in the world to realize famous books and plays with famous actors and actresses would make pictures which made money. Some of his friends told him he was crazy and refused him their capital. Some of them thought he had something and are millionaires today. "Queen Elizabeth," with Sarah Bernhardt, was the first Famous Players venture, and it created attention.

With the growth of pictures came the growth of exploitation of them. At first, simple throwaways, such as are used for small-store bargain sales, were enough for the infant industry. Today, sixteen-car railroad trains filled with correspondents sending news and pictures are considered necessary to make the public realize another picture is coming to town which people ought to see. In addition, every medium for supplying information finds it necessary to devote some time or space to telling the public about the moving pictures for which it has such an insatiable appetite.

THE public has not only developed a tremendous appetite for fiction in celluloid, but it has created its own heroes and heroines from among the actors and actresses who appear in the pictures. Just as in past centuries European peoples had their kings and queens, dukes and duchesses, today the American public—and a large part of the world public—has its Garbos and its Gables. They place them on pedestals, and sometimes they take off their heads. A star who feels herself slipping is as worried as a queen who hears the roll of the tumbrils.

But she has one advantage over the queen—she always can hire a better publicity man. Publicity men work day and night to make the public feel that they know everything about their favorites. No popular moving picture actor or actress can go to the hospital for an appendectomy without making the front page of every metropolitan newspaper, and most of the newspapers in smaller cities. People collect the autographs of stars the way they used to collect the autographs of signers of the Declaration of Independence.

THIS great interest in moving pictures and the people who appear in them is no accidental growth, and the publicity men who have contributed to it have had a comparatively easy time, for they have a product the public wants and people the public wants to know all about. Often, of course, stunts are stimulated to make people more interested than they would be ordinarily in a mediocre package of personality. But, on the whole, motion picture stars have to complain that they live in gold-fish bowls, rather than nunneries. They cannot afford privacy, and the public always will take to a new glamour, if the old is not maintained.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—It's easier to get by with murder than it is to get a bill through congress.

According to the International Association of Police Chiefs, if you commit a murder and the murder is discovered, you have from one chance in 10 to one in four (depending on what city you're in) of getting away with it.

If you are in Washington and in congress, you have about one chance in 25 of getting a bill written into the statute books as an honest-to-gospel law.

At a recent session of congress, there were nearly 18,000 bills introduced. Of these, a few more than 700 got the President's John Hancock and went into the statutes to help or hinder you and me and Joe Doaks.

The Objectors.

CONSIDERING that there have been 76 congresses each sitting for a couple of years, that may seem like a infernal number of laws. It is. But consider that a vast number of these were private bills—measures which gave some worthy widow a life-time pension—or provided Federal aid to a small district's river system—or did this and that for some individual or little group.

These bills are numberless, and, to cope with them, the house has an Objectors' committee, composed of three Democrats and three Republicans. One objection from the Objectors generally is enough to make a measure worth less than the paper it was written on.

In the senate, bills can be introduced only in the last two hours of any legislative day. The catch is that if business is rushing, a legislative day may last for months of calendar days.

Bills introduced in the senate are referred to one of the 37 standing committees by the vice-president. The committee may refer it to a sub-committee. There are hearings, redrafts, recommendations, majority and minority reports, the committee of the whole, and the interminable wait for it to show up on the calendar (unless the steering committee prescribes that it should have preference over everything else).

A lot of bills go to committees and never come to light again.

Both Houses Debate It.

IN THE senate, bills are introduced by being read. In the house, they merely are dropped into a hopper by the speaker's desk, to be gathered up by the house parliamentarian and assigned to committee. Many disappear into that hopper as into a grave.

Once a bill gets up on the floor, it has got to stand a Joe Louis barrage. In the house debate on a bill is limited to one hour and amendments must be germaine. In the senate, there's no limit on debate (hence the filibuster) and amendments can be made on any subject under the sun. The anti-lynching amendment is a favorite method of making the tail of the kite so heavy the kite won't rise.

If the bill is lucky enough to get by one house, it has to go to the other. Differences of opinion in the houses generally are settled in a joint committee, the reports of which are undebated. Then, if the bill passes, it's ready for the president's signature—or veto.

Tularemia May Be War Weapon.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

IS BACTERIAL warfare the secret weapon which Hitler plans against his enemies?

We have heard of the idea of spreading disease germs among the enemy population, but the difficulty for a bacteriologist has been to conceive of a plan which would be likely to work.

I have information from a source which must remain anonymous, but which is sufficiently responsible that he has committed himself to writing, that what the Germans have in mind is the transmission of tularemia (better known as rabbit fever).

They are said to have infected colonies of flies, which are being kept in a refrigerator at a temperature of about 40 to 50 degress above zero. It has been found that when these flies are returned to an ordinary warm temperature, they are restored to activity and the tularemia germs begin to develop inside their bodies.

Dropped From Planes.

The flies can be taken from the refrigerator in wholesale quantities and dropped from airplanes to enemy countries. They infect animals, in turn, infect humans just as they have done in this country. This bacteriological war, of course, would be specifically planned for the civilian population and not for the soldiers at the front.

According to bacteriologists and hygienists to whom I have talked, the plan is perfectly feasible. In the first place, tularemia, though it usually occurs in a mild form, may become malignant. We had a number of cases of malignant tularemia resulting in death last fall in the United States. We also have had reports that tularemia affects not only such animals as rabbits (the usual reservoir), but also domestic animals, fowls and even fish.

The German technicians may have developed a special malignant form of tularemia, and one that will have an affinity for domestic rather than wild animals. This form naturally would reach the human population.

Difficulties Encountered.

When one considers any other form of bacterial warfare, he is met with technical difficulties. It would no longer be possible to infect the water supply with the old scourges of typhoid fever or cholera because public health methods are adequate in all civilized countries to protect the population from this source of infection. Bubonic plague is too uncertain because the animals infected might not reach the civilian population. Nobody knows the germ of influenza, so that can't be spread around. The only thing that is left is some form of insect-carried infection.

Tularemia can be prevented by wearing rubber gloves when dressing animals, but such precautions are, as we know from our own experience, too often neglected.

The only catch in this scheme for bacterial warfare is that the tularemia might easily get across the border into Germany, and, with the immunity of the German people weakened by an insufficient diet, as described by Dr. Gumpert in Heil Hunger: Health Under Hitler (published by the Alliance Book corporation), the effects might be more decimating on the German population than on a foreign one.

Ohio Anecdotes

Presidential Candidate.

AT THE Battle of Gettysburg many Ohio regiments fought under Gen. Winfield Scott Hancock who, acting under broad discretionary authority from General Meade, virtually selected the field of Gettysburg upon which to fight. By feigning a strongly-held position, he dissuaded Gen. Robert E. Lee from attacking immediately.

On the second day, Hancock commanded the left wing, threatening Lee's all-but-successful attempt to turn the federal army's flank. On July 4 Hancock's corps successfully repulsed the Confederate thrust at the North's center line, but Hancock suffered a serious wound.

After the war, Hancock entered politics. In the Democratic convention of 1868, he received a large number of votes as a presidential nominee. At Cincinnati in 1880 Hancock was successful in obtaining the nomination. He was defeated, however, by Ohioan James A. Garfield.

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Integrity.

Integrity, on that is built
The finest life of all.
By it, the taking, leaving of
It, life must rise or fall.

No wealth, no pride commensurate
Or equal to it stands.
Integrity at all times leads
The field, respect commands.

What you can do with honor, do,
And leave undone what must
Without it be accomplished, for
It is the highest trust.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Not many people know it, but one factor which induced the president to favor the sale of latest model U. S. airplanes to the Allies was an economic report on Germany made by prominent British economists.

The report is extremely frank, and it shows that instead of being in danger of starvation as in the last war, the new Nazi economy is geared so that Germany can withstand war for years.

This, together with the recent naval and aviation reverses suffered by the British, has convinced both the White House and the state department that the Allied situation is extremely grave, and that as of today Hitler actually is the victor in Europe.

What the British have not heretofore realized is that the German people for a generation have been geared to withstand privation. During the years of the Republic, immediately after the World war, the toll of reparations and the scarcity of food kept the German people down to a war level of living. Further, in the six years of Hitler's power they have been on food rations, so that the present wartime rations cause no unrest.

Nazi-Communist System.

EVEN more important is the fact that under Nazi economy the great bulk of the people are working for the government. This applies, first, to the mass of petty Nazi officials, which has come to be enormous, and also to labor. For German labor in reality works for the government, wages being standardized and factories being strictly regulated, if not owned by the government. And the Nazi government is extremely careful to see that labor does not get restless.

The middle man or small shopkeeper also is dependent upon the government. He buys his raw materials or his goods at prices fixed by the Nazi officials. And if he fails on his notes, they are not taken up by the bank, which is government-controlled — though how the German banks are able to keep going is a mystery.

In other words, the whole strategy of Hitler is to prevent business collapse and labor unrest—and so far he seems to have been completely successful.

Furthermore, the British economists figure that Germany has raw materials available to keep going a long time. During this war she can tap the rich granaries of Hungary, Jugoslavia and Rumania, to say nothing of Russia; also their ore and oil.

And at present, Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop is working on a gigantic economic tie-up stretching all the way to the Pacific and including Italy, Japan and Russia.

No wonder the British are worried.

Boys Will Be Boys.

BOYS will be boys even on Capitol Hill, and none cuts more boyish capers than puckish Representatives Jack Houston of Kansas and Luther Patrick of Alabama.

Houston, an alumnus of the stage, and Patrick of the radio, usually perform their horseplay at the expense of pompous colleagues, but they are not above working out on each other. This happened the other day while the dark-browed Kansan was delivering a serious speech on the farm question.

Patrick strode down the aisle and came to a halt directly in front of Houston, fixing him with a stern stare. Patrick said nothing, just stood there looking at Houston with a deadpan expression.

At first Houston paid no attention to this singular behavior, but presently he stopped and stared back. The House began to titter. Finally, Houston said, "I yield to my friend from Alabama."

Patrick studied him for a few moments, then observed, "That won't be necessary. I withdraw my question."

"I thank the gentleman for his very learned and illuminating contribution," replied Houston solemnly, with a deep bow, while the house roared with laughter.

Frank's GOP Platform.

IF YOU have been following the campaign speeches of the Republican candidates, you probably have been struck by this interesting coincidence:

That on all major issues their views are practically identical; and that all these views are strikingly similar to the ideas expressed in the report of the Glenn Frank Program Committee.

As one Republican veteran on Capitol Hill sagely observed, "The boys apparently are writing their speeches with a Thesaurus in one hand and the Frank report in the other."

This quiet borrowing from the Frank report is particularly evident on the farm issue. The Frank Committee, in effect, approved the AAA but criticized allegedly inefficient and bureaucratic administration. Also it advocated that the emphasis on benefit payments should be on "soil conservation" rather than on the New Deal's "crop control."

The Frank "farm plank" unquestionably scored in the crucial grain belt. It was widely republished and enthusiastically endorsed by many prominent local Republicans. This was not lost on the three leading GOP candidates, Dewey, Taft and Vandenberg.

Since publication of the report they have followed its "farm plank" very closely. In his Omaha speech, Dewey practically echoed the plank. Taft, who last December in Des Moines took a poke at farm subsidies, sang a more Frank-like tune in his second try at the farm issue at Springfield, Ill. And Vandenberg's Senate declamations on the subject also have been along the lines of the Frank report.

Political Chaff.

NATIONAL Chairman John Hamilton is predicting privately that Ex-President Hoover will enter the Philadelphia convention with 200 votes, half of them controlled by John Pew, potent Pennsylvania boss . . . During his recent visit to his home state, Kansas, Secretary of War Harry Woodring told friends he expects to return there with his family next year. . . . Republican leaders are prophesying that if former Nebraska Governor A. J. Weaver wins the party nomination for senator, while anti-New Deal Senator Ed Burke is renominated on the Democratic ticket, the state GOP organization will openly support Burke in the fall election. Weaver, a Norris-Liberal, campaigned for Roosevelt in 1936. . . . Walter Kohler, sanitary-ware manufacturer and former governor of Wisconsin, is being urged by state GOP chiefs to run against senator Bob LaFollette. . . . A recent local election that has caused much lifting of political eyebrows was the mayoralty primary in St. Paul, Minn., in which John McDonough, backed by Farmer-Labor forces, scored a surprising victory over Mayor Fallon, supported by the GOP. Two years ago the Farmer-Laborites were swept out of office, and the politicians wonder if the St. Paul ballot presages a comeback.

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

TODAY up along the steep slope above the gravel road, I renewed the acquaintance of my friends, the groundhog. Last fall, as late as mid-November, I saw him forage about the stalks of clover and lush bluegrass. I saw another, equally well conditioned, but not so large, and judged they were a pair. Ten days later the ground was frozen and white pellets of snow lay in the low wrinkles of the frosted earth. I found snow had dropped into both openings of the groundhog's quiet home, and almost covered the hard tracks of in-goers. There they had remained, and would sleep through the entire winter, if undisturbed.

On Groundhog day I visited this little home again, and ten others along the hill. I packed snow into the openings and returned at evening to find them undisturbed. "The groundhog did not see his shadow after all," I reported. One year I dug one out in February and found him so sound asleep that a week of warm weather would have been needed to arouse him from his stupor.

Yesterday fresh sticky mud and newly dug sandstone were on the lookout concealed in tall brambles above the groundhog hole. Early thaws had partially closed the entrance with soft mud. The groundhogs are doing some spring housecleaning, and I doubt not that in a cozy nest of leaves and dark gray fur are small soft groundhog babies whose eyes are open only to damp stony walls and whose uncertain feet have never borne them to the bright light of the upper world. I stopped close to the newly surfaced mound and watched him graze some thirty feet down the slope.

He was thin and haggard. The winter sleep has used the layer of fat beneath his flimsy hide. He ate the flat crowns of clover greedily and looked about for more. I stepped upon a dry twig and the sharp sound caused him to rise on his haunches and look around anxiously. I stood near the entrance of his home and my wary friend waddled rapidly up the hill and brushed against the toes of my plow shoes as he entered his low door.

I notice that the grass and brambles grow taller and stronger wherever these homes chance to be. It seems this furry creature does something to enrich the soil so that his home may be concealed more easily.

CHAPTER V.

"But why?" Elaine asked excitedly. "Why was Mrs. Reardon so angry? We didn't do anything wrong."

Aunt Ella shrugged her shoulders. "The story was in the newspapers. And you know how she is about the subject of drinking."

So that was it. For a moment Elaine was tempted to explain to Aunt Ella that it had been only Betty who had gotten drunk. But then she decided bitterly against it. Explanations would do no good. Mrs. Reardon had been anxious to break up the marriage and she was merely using this as an excuse.

Grimly she fought back the tears that threatened to sweep down her cheeks. She wouldn't cry. She wouldn't let any one know how much Mrs. Reardon and Eric had hurt her. She turned her head on the pillow to face the wall.

"I—I guess that's that," she sobbed wildly.

"I know how you feel," Aunt Ella said sympathetically. "But—well you must forget all about it. And once you get back home. . . ."

* * *

This was something Elaine had forgotten. She turned quickly around as Aunt Ella rose from the chair. Home! But she couldn't return to Lynville. Away from Eric, she might somehow manage to forget she had ever loved him. But seeing him every day, recalling those ecstatic moments when he pressed her close in his arms, she could never forget the happiness that might have been.

"I'm not going home," she told Aunt Ella with quiet determination. "I couldn't go back now." Her eyes pleaded for understanding.

Aunt Ella patted her hand. "I understand, child. Perhaps the best thing would be for you to get away somewhere and straighten the whole thing out with yourself." She pondered a moment. "Perhaps you would like to go to New York. You could always find a job there and perhaps you might even do something with your voice. Didn't Clara once offer to speak to a voice teacher acquaintance of hers about you?"

The infinitely drawn expression on Elaine's face softened and she nodded her head. A job! Her voice! New York. Yes, that was the solution. She could lose herself in work and study. That would help her forget.

"We'll talk it over tomorrow," Aunt Ella said after a glance at her watch. "Now then, promise you won't take the whole thing too seriously?"

Elaine laughed miserably. "I—I guess I'm quite a bother to you."

"You're the best niece a person ever had," Aunt Ella snorted. She bent down and pressed a tender kiss on her cheek. "Now remember," she cried moving towards the door. "Don't think about it."

* * *

Elaine watched the door close after her, trying desperately to halt the tears that rose in her eyes. It wasn't until she was again alone in the room that she surrendered to her grief. Unable to bear the thought of life without Eric, she burrowed her face deep into the pillow and made no effort to stem the deluge of tears. Eric wasn't going to marry her! She would never see him again! Those nights when he had whispered sweet nothings in her ear—he had been lying then. He had sworn to love her always, but that was what all men said when they stole kisses beneath a glowing moon. He had been no different from the others, only more clever.

He had given her a "line" that she had believed.

She was still crying fifteen minutes later when Dr. Stuart, accompanied by Clara and a strange young man, entered the room. Elaine had not heard the door open and was not aware of their presence until a firm hand drew her head from the pillow and Dr. Stuart said, "Here, now, tears are worse than sleeping too much."

Elaine knew that she should be ashamed of her tear-distorted countenance, but somehow she wasn't. She didn't care who saw her crying. After all, it was her own business if she chose to cry, and besides, it was her heart that had been broken. She stared defiantly at him, but somehow his steady, unflinching gaze had the effect of making her feel sheepish, almost childish. She hastened into an explanation. "I—I've had some bad news."

Her remarks apparently did not come as a surprise to him for after a silent moment he shrugged his shoulders. "Yes, I know. I read about it in the papers. But perhaps everything has happened for the best. It's better to find out what a man is like before you marry him anyway."

* * *

Elaine knew he was trying to be kind and she smiled her appreciation. She accepted gratefully the big snowy handkerchief he handed her and dabbed with it at her eyes. It wasn't until she had handed it back to him that she saw Clara and the young man standing quietly near the door.

"Clara," she said in a dreary voice, "I'm awfully glad to see you."

"So I notice," Clara remarked sarcastically. But she was all sympathy as she walked over to the bed. "Dr. Stuart is really right, Elaine. Heavens, it is best to find out the worst before you marry a man. And speaking of men," she motioned to the stranger, "this is Tony's brother, Peter."

"I know how you must feel," Peter said, stepping over to the bed. "And I hate to bother you. But, well, Tony is still being held in jail and I was wondering if you would help me to get him out."

"Jail?" Wide-eyed with amazement, Elaine looked questioningly at Clara and was surprised to see her slowly nod her head.

"They're holding him on a charge of drunken driving," Clara informed her. "I explained he wasn't drunk at the time of the accident but they said they'd need more proof. Peter here wants you to sign a paper absolving him from all blame."

In her concern for Tony, Elaine forgot her own troubles. "Of course I'll sign the paper. Gracious, it wasn't Tony's fault." She took the pen Peter proffered and affixed her signature to the paper. She smiled up at him. "If you want anything more I'll be glad to help you."

"That's all," Peter said briefly, stuffing the paper back into his pocket.

"And now, what about you?" Clara queried after he had left the room. "What are you going to do?"

Elaine didn't answer for a moment but simply looked quietly at her friend, pleased to see that the accident had in no way affected Clara. If anything, her chum looked prettier than ever in her suit of bright green. Then, seeing Clara fidget impatiently, she told her what she had decided to do. And strangely enough, the more she talked about going to New York the better she liked the idea.

"The only thing that worries me, though, is finding a job. Gosh, I can't accept any more money from Aunt Ella."

"Well, I can arrange for you to study under Monticelli," Clara said briskly. "And as for the job, well, my loving papa has a big department store in New York and I guess he can find a place for you."

Elaine was just beginning to learn how truly Aunt Ella had spoken when she said it wasn't only what you knew, but whom you knew that counted. She smiled her thanks to Clara, who promptly stuck out her tongue.

"What about a place to live?" Dr. Stuart asked. "Have you made any plans about that?"

NATIONAL GUARD MEMBER FINED

One of Uncle Sam's soldiers who went A. W. O. L. was fined $25 yesterday when he pleaded guilty before Lieut. Russell Seymore, summary court officer of Battery D, 134th field artillery. The court suspended $15 of the fine.

He is Gene Williams, 29 Remy avenue, a private who has been in the company for about six months.

Williams was arrested Saturday by police on warrant signed by Capt. R. J. Nichols, battery commander. Nichols charged the youth with failure to report regularly for drill. He said he was also absent at a recent federal inspection.

CCC CAMPS TO INVITE VISITORS

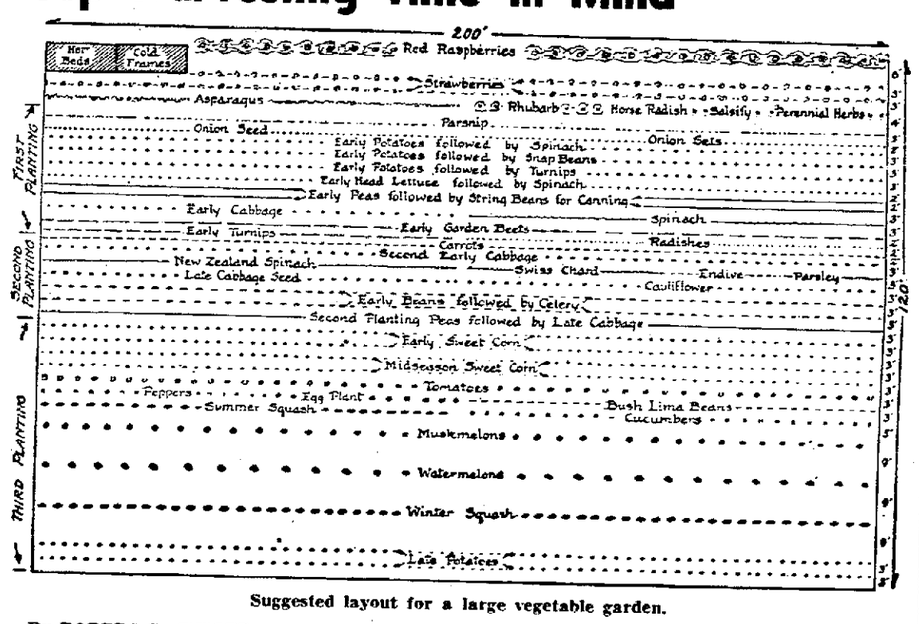
All CCC camps in Ohio will observe open house next Friday, Saturday, and Sunday afternoons when the public will be permitted to inspect the camps and view the work being done by the youths in them.

Dates for visitors' days were set by federal CCC officials at Washington who urged parents of the camp youths, particularly, to visit camps.

Camp Mohican near Loudonville is the most convenient one for Mansfielders.

Planning a Garden?

When You Plant Your Vegetables Keep Harvesting Time In Mind



Suggested layout for a large vegetable garden.

By ROBERT E. GEIGER

Like the flower garden, the vegetable plot should be planned carefully on paper before seeds are purchased.

SECOND IN A SERIES

Tastes of the whole family should govern the selections and you should plan 20 or 30 varieties to provide a good selection. Mark off a space for each variety on your plan. Rows should be parallel and as long as possible.

Group your short-season crops so that it will be easy to plant a second crop after the first has been harvested. Vegetables that have a long growing season, and of which there will be but one harvest, should be planted in another section.

In laying out short-season crops arrange things so that an early cool season crop will be followed by a warm-season one and then, if your season is long enough, you can have a fall planting. This system makes the most of a small plot.

Don't plant all the seeds of your perishable vegetables at once. Sow only enough at first to supply the family, at harvest, for a week or two. A week after the first planting, sow enough for another week or two and later make a third planting. In this way the family will be able to eat garden fresh products over a long period.

This isn't important with vegetables that can be held for use after harvest.

Perennials, such as asparagus, rhubarb, small fruits and herbs, should be planted at the edge of the garden so they will not be disturbed by cultural operations necessary for the annual plants.

Tomorrow: Preparing seed beds.

Will Attend State Meeting In Cincinnati as Representative of Medical Auxiliary; Group Has Social.

AT THE SOCIAL MEETING of the Richland County auxiliary to the Medical Association Mrs. Lincoln Fisher was named as delegate for the auxiliary to the Ohio State Medical meeting which will be held next month in Cincinnati. The 31 members met Monday at the Mansfield-Leland hotel with Mrs. W. H. Buker and Mrs. Paul Blackstone, Bellville, and Mrs. C. L. Hannam, Plymouth, as hostesses.

There were seven tables of bridge in play during the afternoon with Mrs. J. L. Stevens and Mrs. C. R. Damron winning the prizes. Mrs. Stevens conducted the routine business session.

Mrs. O. H. Schettler and Mrs. R. C. Rehder presided at the tea table which was decorated with a centerpiece of snapdragons.

The auxiliary will meet again May 6 with Mrs. George J. Searle, jr., and Mrs. F. M. Wadsworth at the Women's Club. Dr. Mabel Emery Huston will speak on "Women In Medicine."

Changes of Dates Upsets Routine of Planned Sessions

Postponements and date changes loom large on the society horizon these days, as Mansfield apparently is one of the busiest cities in the state, and nobody ever seems to have the good fortune to pick dates for club sessions which don't sooner or later run into a conflict with some large civic affair.

Last night the final program of the Civic Music association which presented Gladys Swarthout here at Mansfield Senior high school was the occasion for several changes. As was previously announced in these columns members of the Monday Study club advanced their date to April 8 with Mrs. Howard Wenning as hostess at her home on Forest Hill road.

Members of Beta Sigma Phi sorority also had to change their plans and instead of meeting last night they arranged to meet this evening with Miss Doris Goodenough, Lexington avenue. Mrs. John McCann will be the associate hostess.

Mrs. Ott Hostess For Luncheon At Hotel

Sixteen members of St. Peter's guild met for luncheon at the Mansfield-Leland hotel yesterday at 1 o'clock. Mrs Louis A. Ott was hostess for the afternoon, and the group played bridge at four tables at her home on West Third street.

Prizes in the games were awarded to Mrs. Charles Tharp and Mrs. Fred Walter. Mrs. A. H. Lewis will be hostess for the next luncheon meeting at the hotel on April 15.

Nuptial Parade Continues Slowly During April, May

The nuptial parade, which was in full swing at Easter time, is lulling a bit now, with most girls planning for the traditional June weddings. There are, however, a few marriages scheduled for the coming month.

Miss Mary Ann Jasinsky, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jasinsky, 65 McPherson street, will become the bride of Anton Schadek, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Schadek, sr., 378 First avenue, at 10:30 o'clock this Saturday morning before the altar of St. Peter's Catholic church.

On April 27, Miss Helen Whiting Pond and Harold D. Burns will be married at the former's home in Elyria. As Mr. Burns has been engaged in the practice of law here for the past four years, he and his bride will reside here following the wedding.

Miss Kathleen Baker has chosen May 4 as the date for her wedding to Tolbert E. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl R. Smith of Tulsa, Okla. Rev. Peter Young will perform the open church ceremony before the altar of the First Congregational church at 4:30 o'clock. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hoy E. Baker, 139 Lind avenue.

MEET THURSDAY.

Members of the Iota Sigma W. C. T. U. will have a covered-dish dinner at the Johns park pavilion at 6 o'clock followed by a talk, "Problem of Delinquency," by Rev. M. W. Wappner, chaplain at Ohio State Reformatory.

Hagelbarger and Mrs. Lewis B. McCullough serving as hostesses.

The spring flower decorated table was presided over by Mrs. Mary Thornberry and Mrs. Lewis Brucker. Miss Aileen Dunham, of the history department of Wooster college, was guest speaker of the afternoon.

Following the business session, which was conducted by Mrs. Rose Berry, the group played five hundred and bunco. Prizes in the games were won by Mrs. Clara Cramer and Mrs. Mary Hill, while Mrs. Elizabeth Konves received the club prize.

The hostess served refreshments at the close of the evening. Mrs Effie Keltner has invited the members to her home on Wayne street for the next meeting, May 6.

Women To Plan Golf Activities In Near Future

Come April Fool's day, come showers, come sunshine, come flowers—or in general COME SPRING, and certain accompaniments arrive as sure as sure can be. In the last few days the residential sections have been filled with young people roller skating, jumping rope, flying kites and bicycling—and even swing golf clubs on the slowly greening lawns.

Which brings us to what we were about to say. Although the golfing season generally makes its official debut along about mid-May the past few sunny afternoons have been encouraging to those addicted to the pursuit of the little white ball.

As a result unofficial announcements have been made that members of the executive committees at both Westbrook Country club and Possum Run golf course will meet within the next few days to set up the season program for the women's associations at the two courses. Details will be available soon, so get out your clubs and have your shoes cleaned for the first golfing day.
